Inflation shows signs of getting worse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with help from the new tax cut, many Americans face a substantial loss of purchasing power this year because of inflation.

With the year nearly half over, government figures indicate that inflation will be significantly worse this year than in 1976 when consumer prices advanced 4.8 per cent.

Inflation pushed consumer prices up 3.2 per cent in the first four months of the year, and the Carter administration recently raised its inflation forecast for all of 1977 from 5.3 per cent to 6.7 per cent.

But the recent pace of inflation is causing speculation that it could be worse than that before the year is over.

Administration economists expect a slowdown in the inflation rate after midyear, especially in food prices, which have risen 5 per cent in the first four months.

Nonetheless, there are signs of concern.

President Carter told a news conference Thursday that his "main concern at this point on the economic scene is the rate of inflation ..."

And the pace of inflation clearly is behind moves by the money-managing Federal Reserve Board to tighten growth of the money supply to make loans more expensive.

On Friday, several major banks raised their prime lending rate for loans from 6½ to 6¾ per cent, the second increase in a week. Since higher interest rates can discourage economic growth, the stock market responded by pushing the Dow Jones industrial average for stocks below 900, to 898, for the first time since Jan. 7, 1976.

Although Carter has previously said inflation and unemployment could be battled simultaneously, his latest statement appeared to move him a big step closer to the position of former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon that inflation was "public enemy No. 1."

There are a lot of reasons why Carter and his advisers worry about the recent high rate of inflation.

For one thing, rising prices mean consumers may have to cut back on expenditures. There were signs that this may have started in April, when retail sales failed to increase for the first time in months.

The combination of reduced consumer buying plus higher interest rates could endanger administration goals for economic growth and employment.

The real purchasing power of workers' paychecks declined in April for the fourth time in five months and was one-tenth of 1 per cent below what it was a year earlier. That was after adding in increased pay.

While the tax cuts signed into law by Carter last week will reduce taxes by about $100 a year for the average family of four, the losses to inflation should more than offset that.

Even if inflation holds to the 6.7 per cent forecast by the administration, it still means a person with $10,000 income would lose $670 in purchasing power because of higher prices by year end. That person already had lost $320 in purchasing power by the end of April

Until April, at least, consumers had been increasing their purchases, in part, by drawing on savings. Americans were saving only 4.8 per cent of their income in the first quarter of this year, one of the lowest rates in years. The savings rate was 7.8 per cent in 1975 and 6.5 per cent last year.

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, is pessimistic about the pace of consumer spending in months ahead, partly because the savings rate is so low and because it is likely consumers will want to build their savings up again.

One reason consumers reduced their savings, she said, may have been that they anticipated receiving the $50-per-person tax rebate that Carter had proposed but then withdrew earlier this year.

A rising inflation rate also could underonistration efforts to win restraint in wage increases this year. So far, wage hikes have been averaging about 8 per cent a year, a rate that may not continue to satisfy workers if it appears inflation will outpace those gains.

Rising wage rates usually result in even higher price increases, resulting in a wage-price spiral that the administration wants to avoid.

Carter has announced an anti-inflation program that rests heavily on his ability to work with both labor and management to moderate wage and price increases.

So far, they have only agreed to talk about what causes inflation.

NEW MADRID— A 21-year-old Catron man, Rodger Dale Ervin, drowned at 11:30 p.m. Friday after walking into the water at a washout located one and a half miles off route D, between New Madrid and Lilbourn.

New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton said Ervin had been sitting on the bank during a party with a group of other youths when he said he felt like going into the water. Clayton said Ervin was dressed in slacks with no shirt on when he got up and headed for the water, according to statements given by witnesses who said that was the last time he was seen.

Clayton said it was also reported that Ervin could not swim.

Sheriff Walter Ivy, Ronnie Patterson and Gary Kimball of the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department recovered Ervin's body in about 12 feet of water 25 feet from

3 injured in 2 accidents

The highway patrol reported three persons received minor injuries in two traffic accidents on area roads Saturday.

In a single-vehicle accident at 3 a.m. Saturday, on Route Z two miles north of Morehouse, Paul Cureton, 26, of Marquand, driver of a northbound pickup truck, and a passenger, Willis Layton, 28, of Bloomfield, received minor injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

The patrol said the accident occurred when Cureton's truck ran off the left side of the road on a curve and went into a field before overturning and coming to rest on its wheels.

At 12:50 p.m. Saturday, on Highway 60, 150 feet east of the Charleston city limits, Ruby J. Eatmon, 66, of Osceola, Ark. a passenger in a westbound car driven by Alvin Burnett, 50, of Rochester, Ind., received injuries when Burnett stopped his vehicle behind another one and was struck from behind by a westbound car driven by Harold Allen Cox, 18, of Charleston.

The patrol said the Eatmon woman refused treatment for her injuries.

TV and radio sets stolen

DEXTER— Jim Bullington reported two televisions and two clock radios were stolen from his Route One home Friday night on the Keith Hampton farm, located southeast of town.

Upon investigation, the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department reported the home had been entered by forcing open a back door. The time of the theft was placed between 9 and 10:30 p.m. while Bullington was away from the home.

Value of the missing televisions and radios was estimated at $105.

The sheriff's department is continuing the investigation.

Economic talks to enter final round

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final round of formal talks between the world's economic haves and have-nots opens Monday in Paris with the industrialized rich offering the underdeveloped poor some aid but mostly promises.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is going to Paris to take over the American delegation at the final session of the 27-nation Conference on International Economic Cooperation (CIEC).

Vance will present proposals worked out with other rich nations aimed at ending the 18-month conference, commonly called the North+South Dialogue, on a positive and conciliatory note.

U.S. officials say that to accomplish this, the poor nountries will be offered special economic aid and some spepledges to continue the effort to close the economic gap.

In exchange, the underdeveloped nations are expected to drop what the United States sees as unacceptable demands and to avoid emotional public criticism of the rich nations.

No one in the industrialized world claims these proposals will end the frustrations and bitterness of the poor countries or seriously close the economic gap between the two spheres.

But the poor countries are expected to accept the approach by the rich because the dialogue will continue and promises are better than nothing.

There are six major areas under discussion at Paris: commodities, resource and development aid, international debts, energy, capital investment and trade.

Under a general program worked out at an economic summit meeting in London earlier this month, the industrialized nations will approach these six areas in the following way:

—Commodities. Stabilize a few commodity prices, including copper, coffee, rubber, sugar and tin. This involves creating buffer or surplus stocks to keep the market supply steady when production falls short.

·A so-called "common fund" also would be used to finance this plan and to spread out price fluctuations by using money made from one commodity to support prices of others.

This approach falls far short of the original demands by the underdeveloped countries, which had called for a common fund and buffer stocks covering 18 com-

Fake food stamps discovered by secretary in local market

A secretary at Bruce's Big Star supermarket here, noticed something odd about some $1, $5 and $10 food stamps she was counting Monday afternoon.

"They looked almost like regular food stamps," Barbara Norton said, " except they were faded, instead of being a good green color. The design wasn't detailed either. It was very blurred. And the paper was a lot thicker than usual."

She called Sikeston police, who told her to call the welfare office. That office checked with the regional welfare office and told her to send the $70 in counterfeit food stamps to the St. Louis office of the Secret Service.

According to Miss Norton, there was "no way of telling who" passed the fakes. "We have maybe 300 customers through each of our seven cash registers every day."

A spokesman for the St. Louis Secret Service office said Friday, "it hasn't just cropped up down there. The same ones showed up about three months ago in St. Louis— about $100 worth, I guess — and then the activity around here ceased.

"I'm assuming the banks were the ones who caught the stamps because they all had the same serial numbers. We just put out an alert with the serial numbers."

Lester McQuaid, who handles food stamps for the Federal Reserve in St. Louis, said the counterfeit food stamps that showed up three months ago were "the first case we've had that I can remember. There's nothing we can do about counterfeits except hand them over to the Secret Service.

"The fact that they were all the same serial number doesn't necessarily mean that they were counterfeit," McQuaid added.

Sikeston Public Safety Detective E. D. Speakman said the investigation had shown few results so far, but "we're working on it. We've had some counterfeit bills passed before, but no food stamps."

The Secret Service spokesman said the maximum sentence for each instance of passing a counterfeit food stamp, a federal offense, is five years in prison.

Today's news in brief

Sharpshooters stop gunman

He walked backward down the center lane of Interstate 94, saying "I'm going to kill 'em," Detroit Police Sgt. James Ayers said.

"At that point," Ayers said, "the green light was given." A Detroit police department marksman fired one shot, killing Taylor.

The six hostages were not hurt.

Rebels still resist in Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Angola's Marxist government said Saturday some rebels were still resisting after a bloody uprising that took the lives of at least six government leaders.

President Agostinho Neto, in a speech monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., named five members of the governing Council of Revolution and the director of security services as being killed in the revolt by extreme leftists. He said some of the bodies had been burned.

In Lisbon, the Portuguese news agency ANOP reported the burned bodies of the six officials had been found in a suburb of Luanda, the Angolan capital.

Among those named by both Neto and the ANOP report as dead were Finance Minister Saydi Mingas and army commander Eurico Goncalves.

Magnets may clean up coal

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists say they have found that magnets can pluck impurities out of dirty coal so it will burn almost pollution-free.

If the new method proves to be cheap enough, they say it could help provide vast new quantities of coal that will be clean enough to run power plants.

The technique, developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, removes most of the sulfur and 40 per cent of the ash-forming, noncombustible material from coal.

France to build power plant

PARIS (AP) — France will build a nuclear power plant of the plutonium breeding type recently banned in America by President Carter, it was declared formally Saturday.

The government's Official Journal published a decree signed by Premier Raymond Barre May 12 authorizing construction of the "Super Phoenix" fast-neutron plant at Creys+Malville, 28 miles north of Lyon.

Plans call for the plant to be able to produce 50 to 80 times more electricity from the same fuel charge than comparable nuclear plants in France and or abroad. It is rated for 1,200 megawatts and has an estimated cost of $900 million — not including its fuel load of 35 tons of a mixture of uranium and plutonium oxides.

Carter barred such breeder reactors in the United States as a unilateral step against the proliferation of plutonium which can be used in nuclear weapons.

99 dead in holiday traffic

CHICAGO (AP) — With the Memorial Day weekend well under way, traffic accidents were taking their toll as vacationers took to the highway for the first long summer holday.

By 10 p.m. EDT Saturday, 99 persons had died in traffic crashes.

The National Safety Council has estimated that 400 to 500 persons will lose their lives on the nation's roads over the three-day weekend.

The traffic fatality count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday.

Over the three-day Memorial Day weekend last year, 442 persons were killed in traffic accidents.

The highest toll for a Memorial Day was 629 deaths in the 1968 four-day observance.

Californians face blackouts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nine million Californians are facing the prospect of mandatory blackouts of electrical power this summer because of a lack of water for hydroelectric plants.

"It could be grim," said Don J. Baxter of the giant Pacific Gas & Electric Co., which is mapping plans for possible blackouts in the 47 counties it serves in northern and central California.

"We might well get through the summer without any trouble, but we know for sure that it's going to be close," Baxter added.

The crisis is the worst since 1948, when a war-caused shortage of power plant equipment triggered widespread mandatory conservation, but no blackouts. The mandatory blackouts would be the first in California's history.

They will become a reality only if emergency conservation — such as shutting down all home air conditioners — fails to reduce peak power use enough.

Terrorists still hold 60

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Dutch officials waged a war of nerves Saturday with Asian extremists holding some 60 hostages in a train and a nearby school. Doctors said some schoolchildren released earlier by the terrorists may have meningitis.

Police and troops surrounding the two locations threatened to attack if the terrorists harmed any of the hostages still held after nearly a week, Justice Ministry official Toos Faber said.

Despite the warnings, the South Moluccans who seized the train and school last Monday showed no sign of relenting in demands for the release of comrades jailed for terrorism and a plane to fly them all out of the country.

They also want the Dutch to pressure Indonesia into granting independence for their Pacific island homeland, which was once a Dutch colony.

President gone fishin'

Legislature hard put to resolve prison issue

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — It's getting to be a constantly asked but never answered question before the Missouri Legislature: "What kind of prison should be built and where?"

And although state Sen. Donald Manford prophesied Thursday that the Senate's decision to fund one, new, maximum security prison "would set the state's course on corrections for decades," another state official predicted Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale would go to bat for another plan to build an already planned medium security facility near Kansas City.

As the Senate voted overwhelmingly to support its Appropriations Committee's plan for a small, maximum security prison, Teasdale met for 30 minutes with Social Services Director James Walsh, who has been traveling throughout the state the past three months searching for a medium security prison site.

Walsh had selected and Teasdale endorsed locating the 500-inmate, $21 million prison at a place called Birmingham Bottoms in Liberty, just northeast of Kansas City. But when the Senate Appropriations Commitee reversed the legislature's previous two years of endorsements for the medium security concept and decided to fund the maximum institution, Teasdale said he was willing to go along with whatever the legislature decided.

"He has definitely changed his position. He's ready to go with the Birmingham Bottoms site," said Walsh. "He's no longer going to leave it (site selection) to the legislature."

As the two men were meeting, the Senate concluded about four hours of debate on the question and voted 22-8 to pledge $21 million towards the eventual construction of one $34 million maximum security prison on any parcel of land in the state which was owned or controlled by the Division of Corrections as of the beginning of this year. That limits it to several tracts the division holds in mid-Missouri.

The House version of the bill had appropriated $11 million for continued work on the medium security facility near Kansas City, and $1 million for site location and planning of a similar facility in the St. Louis area.

Manford explained his committee's position, saying the one new maximum facility could be used to house the estimated 500 hard core non-rehabilitatable inmates currently allowed to intermingle with the 1800 less dangerous convicts at the state's current maximum security prison, the Missouri State Penitentiary here. When the new facility is built and the hard core inmates removed to it, the penitentiary would be converted into a large medium security prison, Manford said.

But Sen. A. Clifford Jones, one of two Appropriations Committee members who had voted against the new proposal, said the Senate was again trying to sidestep the question of what kind of a prison to build and where.

At one point during the debate, St. Louis County Democrat John Schneider said, "I feel like we're flopping around here, and the only question we're asking is 'Is it going to be in my district or not'."

A scarlet-faced, fist pounding Jones bellowed that the money the Senate was appropriatiing Thursday would never be spent, as in previous years, and that the Senate was trying to again avoid the prison question. He said the overcrowded conditions which currently plague the state's corrections system would result in a riot similar to the devastating penitentiary disturbance of 1954 when five prisoners were killed, a number of guards and inmates injured and $4 million in property destoryed.

"I will not go through another riot. Don't make me go through another 1954 again," the St. Louis County Republican said. "Now are you going to build a penitentiary or aren't you?" he asked as he sought support for his amendment to appropriate a one-time amount of $25.5 million to plan, locate and construct one prison.

He said he wouldn't mind if the facility was built in his district.

A group of residents near the Birmingham Bottoms location have opposed it, and Rep. Stan Thomas, D-Liberty, has offered a resolution in the House urging Teasdale to go along with the Senate committee's decision.

Sen. Phil Snowden, D-Gladstone, who represents the area where the medium security prison is to be located, is noncommittal on the site, saying he wants to hear from more residents before opposing it.

It was opposition from state Sen. Truman Wilson, D-St. Joseph, that kept the medium security prison from being built near that northwest Missouri city last year.

The legislature has been dickering with the question of a new prison since 1968.

There were plans to build a maximum security prison in 1972 near the Bootheel community of Steele, but those plans were scrapped by then-Gov. Warrne E. Hearnes. Corrections officials said at that time the next prison facility needed to be located in an urban area to provide more facilities, more rehabilitation resources and more diversity in the selection of prison personnel.

The Senate voted to resurrect the Steele idea with the 22-8 vote to approve the $21 million appropriation for a maximum security prison, and then rejected 2-28 Jones' amendment to appropriate a separate $25.5 million for the complete construction of a medium security prison.

The votes came as the Senate considered the state's capital improvements bill, which funds state building projects for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The Senate approved its version of the bill 30-2 later in the day, with Jones and Schneider dissenting.

The Senate bill totals nearly $126 million, while the bill approved in the House is $114.4 million. The differences will be worked out in a compromise committee of the two chambers.

Manford said the overwhelming Senate vote to support its Appropriations Committee would bolster the Senate side in the compromise negotiations with the House on the prison question.

If the plan to build the medium security prison near Kansas City is eliminated by the compromise committee, it could be restored by the full House.

The dispute over the prison could jeopardize the timely passage of the capital appropriations bill, since the legislature is working against a self-imposed June 8 deadline for finishing work on the state's budget one week before the constitutional adjournment of the General Assembly.

The deadline is designed to get the money bills out of the way before the final, hectic week of the session.

If the General Assembly misses the deadline, it will continue a three-year-old tradition of suspending its own rules to allow for the late consideration of the budget bills.

Walsh said Teasdale is going to be lobbying the Senate very strongly. "I think the House is with him."

"He's going to work very hard with the Senate and the House for the Clay County site. He doesn't buy my position that he should buy the land and start development under the present (appropriations) law, but I'm still working on him," Walsh said.

Corrections officials had concluded verbal negotiations with landowners of the Clay County site but the deal was placed in limbo when the Senate committee made its decision.

Don't always expect a child to speak up if something's troubling him. Instead, try to read his body language.

Eye problems affect one in 20 preschool children, so the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness suggests you look for signs like these: excessive rubbing of the eyes, shutting or covering one eye, difficulty with close work, frequent blinking, squinting or frowning. Devil hurlers earn 1-A crown

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports
Editor

LEBANON— "With our pitching, we've got as good a shot as anybody up there," was Chaffee baseball coach Mike Payne's analysis of his team's chances going into the Class 1-A State Tournament.

Payne's forecast would have made even the Amazing Kreskin proud. The Red Devils got standout mound performances from Scott Wachter in Friday's 3-0 victory over St. Joseph LeBlond and from Lindy Duncan in Saturday's 8-1 championship win over Dixon as they claimed the 1-A Missouri title for the second time in three years. The Red Devils were champions in 1975.

Chaffee, which earned victories over Twin Rivers and Lilbourn in th Regional playoffs at Leadwood a week ago, made it look easy in the state competition. Wachter and Duncan gave up only five hits between them in the two-game tournament. The only run that either man gave up in the event came when a Dixon player scored on a wild pitch by Duncan in the fourth inning of Saturday's game.

Wachter enjoyed big games in both contests. His shutout pitching sparked Chaffee in the Friday contest, and he set a state record by driving in five runs in the Saturday game, topping Garry Zellinger's record of four in 1954. Zellinger hit a grand slam homer that year.

Duncan nearly became the second Devil to write himself into the tournament record book with his strong mound stint Saturday. His 14 strikeouts were one short of the championship game record of 15 set by Frank Baumann of St. Louis Central and Jim Johnston of Normandy in the early 50's.

Chaffee struck early against the defending state champions, who had defeated Lilbourn 11-2 to win it last year. The Red Devils tallied seven time in the first two innings, with Wachter swatting a two-run single and a three-run homer and Duncan blasting a two-run clout. Chaffee got a sacrifice fly in the third to add their final run of the afternoon.

Duncan, who finished the game with three hits at the plate, struggled with his control throughout the contest, despite tossing a two-hitter and giving up only one run. An Associated Press story said that Duncan walked 14 batters, a report which Payne said was probably too high.

In Friday's contest, Wachter earned his ninth victory of the season for the Devils against St. Joseph LeBlond. An it was he who scored what proved to be the winning run for Chaffee in the third as he reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and came in on Duncan's single. Duncan had two of Chaffee's six hits in th Saturday game.

Chaffee scored two more times in the fourth, tagging loser Geiger for a pair of unearned tallies. Anthony Austin singled to start the rally, and a walk to Kevin McGuire gave the Devils two on. Randy Horrell was hit by a pitch, and Logan came in to pitch for LeBlond. Tony Dalton's grounder to short was thrown away by Marriott, allowing both McGuier and Horell to cross the plate.

The success at Lebanon capped a big turnaround for the Devils. Injuries to Wachter and catcher Don Kiefer were partly responsible for the team's surprisingly slow 6-5 start, but wins over Twin Rivers and Sikeston in the Chaffee Invitational Tournament got the club moving.

No box score was available on Saturday's championship game.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Can the Portland Trail Blazers come back?

"We're down 2-0, but that doesn't mean the series is over," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay, who hopes his club will start its comeback with a victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in Sunday's third game of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series.

The game will be nationally televised by CBS starting at 3:30 p.m., EDT.

The Portland players aren't quite ready to give up.

"We are a long way from dead," declared forward Maurice Lucas. "We won't lose our confidence," promised guard Herm Gilliam. "Obviously we have to play better, and this is too great a team not to do that."

The move from Philadelphia, where the Sixers posted 107-101 and 107-89 victories, to Portland's Coliseum should help the Blazers, who have won their last six playoff games at home.

"The series started with them having the home-court advantage, and they kept it, that's all," said Blazers' guard Lionel Hollins. "Now we're going to be at home."

"We have upheld our home-court advantage so far, but now it swings to them," said Philadelphia superstar Julius Erving. "I'm sure they'll be tougher on their home floor."

To win, says Ramsay, the Blazers have to play their game.

"They scored 107 points against us," observed Ramsay, "and we can do better than that. We have just got to play our game. I'm not worried about what they do; if we play our game, we can win."

Portland averaged 111.7 points per game during the regular season, third highest in the NBA, but hasn't approached that figure in the two playoff games against the Sixers.

"Philadelphia is playing very well and some of our troubles have to be attributed to that," said Ramsay. Adds assistant coach Jack McKinney, "I would say it was about 50-50 between our mistakes and their good play that put us where we are in this series."

Where the Blazers are is against the wall. They must win Sunday, or else face the next-to-impossible task of taking four straight from the multi-talented Sixers.

To win, Portland will have to get its offense untracked. And that means three things.

First, the Blazers have to get their running game going. "We've been able to control their fast break, which has taken away one of their big weapons," said Sixers Coach Gene Shue. The Blazers need that weapon back in order to win.

Second, when Portland has to set up, it must be able to score on its back-door and give-and-go plays, where center Bill Walton gets the ball and feeds it to players cutting to the basket for layups.

Third, the Blazers have to cut down on their turnovers, 63 in the first two games.

"We're running an ineffective offense and we're turning the ball over," said Ramsay, summing it all up. "That's why we're losing."

Saints' rocky start in Bi-State League continue

Something about little-league-sized Capaha Park brings out the little leaguer in the Sikeston Saints. While absorbing their second straight loss to the Caps the Saints made seven errors in an 11-3 fiasco. Sikeston, second-place finishers in both the pennant race and the playoffs a year ago, are in the Bi-State basement at 0-2.

The seven errors brought to 13 the Saints' miscue total in two encounters with the Cape Girardeau team. Sammy Taylor started and absorbed the loss for Sikeston. Don Buechting, from Festus, Mo., grabbed the win.

Leftfielder Bill Criscione of the Capahas belted two homeruns. The first was a solo shot and the second followed a dropped pop fly, giving him three rbi's. Clay Vangilder also homered.

Bill Schatzley had both Saints runs batted in. Rick Eisenbach was 3-for-4 with a walk for the losers. Centerfielder Ronnie Baker had two hits.

Leadoff man David Gross started the game with what was the story for the whole game. He hit a fly ball to right that should have been caught and ended up at third after a throwing error. He scored on a fly ball.

"It was just a circus," said one Saint, "...a bunch of clowns out there."

The Sints hitters were better prepared than the fielders. They reached the hard-firing Buechting for nine dafeties, but his fielders pulled off a pair of line-drive doubleplays to get him out of trouble.

The Saints had four basehits in the first inning-and-a-third, yet failed to score. Since Cape scored in every frame but the seventh, the game was never really in doubt.

Sikeston hosts Ste. Genevieve Sunday afternoon in a 2 p.m. game Lefty Glen Alexander will be on the mound as the Sikeston team looks for its first win.

Horse earns beer by racing

CASSELBERRY, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Marshal always knows when it's race day. That's the only time the 10-year-old horse is denied his usual daily fare of two six-packs of beer.

"Old Charlie will suck all the beer you can give him and never spill a drop," says owner-trainer Sam Ridgeway. "It really doesn't harm him none and seems to make him a happier horse."

Charlie, who is also is fond of steaks and cold cuts, is known as "a nice quiet drinker" at the Seminole Harness Raceway near Orlando, says Ridgeway.

"There's nothing to it," says Ridgeway. "Charlie's more like a pet hound than a horse. ... He started guzzling beer when he was 3 and that was seven years ago."

The galloping guzzler's abstinence on race days is not voluntary since track stewards insist on sobriety. But Ridgeway says the dry periods affect Charlie so that the horse will start whinnying at the crack of a pop-top.

"I got him back a few months later," says Ridgeway. "Charlie's such a rugged individualist as horses go, if not a downright nut, that nobody else knows how to handle him."

Although Charlie has come in fifth in his last eight races, he has a lifetime mark of 2:07 for the mile run and has earned nearly $40,000 in his career.

"He's never been a stakes champion like some other horses I've developed, but Charlie's a good steady trotter," says Ridgeway. "His winnings average about $5,000 and that's enough to keep the beer flowing."

Reitz blast in third sends Birds past Expos

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Reitz slugged his second home run in as many games, delivering a three-run blast in the third inning to power the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-5 triumph over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Reitz' homer highlighted a four-run inning that sent the Expos to their fourth straight loss and their 15th in their last 17 games.

The Expos jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the opening inning but St. Louis closed to 2-1 in the second and erupted in the next inning against right-hander Don Stanhouse, 3-7.

St. Louis then closed to 2-1 in the second and erupted in the next inning against right-hander Don Stanhouse, 3-7, after Lou Brock touchedoff the assault with a single.

Montreal scored in the eighth on Brock's two-base error in left field and Cash's single. But St. Louis bounced back for two runs in the bottom of the eighth before Del Unser smashed a two-run homer in the ninth.

Brock swiped two bases, giving him 871 for his career and only 21 behind the stolen base career record set Ty Cobb.

Cards' second basxeman Mike Tyson was apprently screened by umpire Ed Sudol on the play and Cash raced to third base when the smash went under Tyson's glove for a single.

Valentine followed with a double that scored Cash. After Tony Perez grounded out, Speier crossed the plate on Cromartie's grounder to shortstop.

Prior to Reitz' homer, St. Louis closed to 2-1 in the second inning when Keith Hernandez doubled, advanced to third on Reitz' single and scored on Dave Rader's sacrifice fly.

350,000 expected 61st Indianapolis 500 today

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Walk through Gasoline Alley the day before the annual Indianapolis 500-mile automobile extravaganza and the air feels a little heavier.

The activity at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway appears less frenzied than at any time during the two critical weeks leading up to the world's richest race, but don't you believe it.

It's time for the last-minute engine work that can mean the difference between the checered victory flag and the adulation of millions of race fans and a sudden and very unsettling meeting with a concrete wall at 200 mile an hour.

The failure of a two-bit part has cost at least one driver—Joe Leonard—a triumph that might have made him wealthy and famous—not a guaranteed payoff, but one that has been enjoyed by more than one Indy victor.

When the 33 glamorous and glistening championship cars take the parade lap before Sunday's 61st running of the Memorial Day Classic, it will be a tossup who will feel the trepidation more, the driver taking life in hand in the form of a steering wheel or the mechanic who has put the powerful machines together over and over while seeking perfection.

The 2.5-mile oval track surrounds a sprawling infield area where the race-day inhabitants, who cough up $7 for a general admission ticket, generally are more interested in eating chicken, drinking beer, sleeping in the sun and watching scantily clad members of the opposite sex wander aimlessly throughout the long race day.

Most of the spectators arrive early, spending as much as several hours fighting the traffic to get in only to find the same jam-up awaiting their tired and often overheated departure some time in the late afternoon.

But, strangely, many who come to this celebration of speed and danger find they are drawn back year after year.

Red Sox outslug Royals

BOSTON (AP) — Designated-hitter Jim Rice drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a single Saturday, helping the Boston Red Sox to rally for a wild 17-12 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Rice, beaten out for the regular left-field job by veteran Carl Yastrzemski, drilled a two-run homer off Larry Gura in the fifth, belted another two-run job off Marty Pattin in the sixth, and then lined a run-scoring single in the seventh.

Yastrzemski, Carlton Fisk, Dwight Evans and George Scott also homered for the Red Sox, who lead the American League with 60 homers in 42 games.

The Royals jumped to an 8-2 lead with a five-run fourth inning. However, the Red Sox bounced back with two runs on Fisk's ninth homer in their half of the inning and then exploded for seven runs in the fifth.

National League action kicks off with Pizza Inn versus Lions at 6:35 followed by Kiwanis squaring off against Legion at 8:15.

Junior Babe Ruth action begins Tuesday with schedules to follow later. Senior Babe Ruth play also will begin this week after the league schedule has been revised to include two new teams.

World record crappie made someone good meal

COLUMBIA— The biggest crappie you ever saw ... you never saw.

After two years, a fish story to end fish stories has surfaced. Clyde Moore, creel census clerk for the Department of Conservation, checked a crappie one night on Table Rock Lake.

The lady was in a hurry and the fish was not weighed, but it was measured -- twice because the measurement was so incredible. The crappie was 23 inches long.

Now that might not mean much to anglers conditioned to weights. But the world record white crappie, largest of the two species recognized, was 21 inches long in Field and Stream magazine's listing.

Okay, you say, the creel clerk probably mistook a white bass for a crappie. Department of Conservation creel clerks don't make mistakes like that, but even assuming he did....

Field and Stream's world record white bass measured 19½ inches. Moore estimated the fish would have weighed near six pounds. The F&S record crappie weighed five pounds, three ounces and the white bass 5:05.

He tried to tell the lady that she probably had at least a state record on her stringer, but she indicated she didn't care and was he through measuring yet?

State records must be authenticated as to species and weight by a qualified Department of Conservation employee and before Field and Stream or the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame will authenticate national records, the state record must be authentic.

As an afterthought, the lady told Moore yes, it was a big crappie--big enough, she was sure, to feed the whole family....

Cubs move into first

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Morales' bases-clearing double keyed a five-run sixth inning Saturday and sent the rampaging Chicago Cubs to a 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The triumph was the fourth straight and 20th in the last 25 games for the Cubs, who vaulted past the Pirates into first place in the National League East by one-half game.

Jim Rooker had a 2-0 lead and a one-hit shutout going into the sixth when the Cubs struck. Ivan DeJesus walked, and singles by Gene Clines and Larry Biittner produced one run. Bobby Murcer singled to fill the bases and Morales followed with his three-run double. Singles by Manny Trillo and George Mitterwald off reliever Kent Tekulve produced the final run.

Truman takes 2A flag

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two Lindbergh errors and a triple by Jeff Barnard gave Truman Independence a 6-3 victory in the Missouri 2A High School Baseball championship Saturday afternoon.

The championship victory, bolstered by seven strikeouts from Truman's winning pitcher Bruce Sampson, 8-2, came on the 39th birthday of retiring Truman coach Clyde Kupli.

A walk and two Truman hits loaded the bases. Then Lindbergh short stop Jeff Lenger gloved a ball deep in the hole and threw to third, too late to get the runner. One run scored on the error.

On the next play Lindbergh third baseman Tim Sundhausen let a ball slip under his glove, scoring another run. Then with the bases still loaded Barnard, a sophomore third baseman, banged a three-run triple off the left center field fence, closing out the scoring.

Truman finished the season with a 23-3 record; Lindbergh was 18-9.

. In Memoriam

In Loving Memory
Jesus came and took him
One cold April day,
And we read in the Bible
It would happen just this way.
We always took for granted
When we had him so near,
That we could sometimes touch him,
He would always be here
Jesus told us long ago
To love with all our might,
Lest he came unexpectedly
Like a thief in the night.
But he left us one comfort,
When Father went away,
He gave us loving memories
We cherish everyday.
The wife, children, and grandchildren of Roy L. Rhyne, Sr.

2. Card of Thanks

We wish to take this opportunity for the purpose of thanking those who sent wonderful floral arrangements, food and other kindnesses to us during the time of our sorrow. Especially do we thank Rev. Eldon Russell, Rev. John Rhame, The Welsh Funeral Home, and the pallbearers. Those kindnesses will be remembered always.
The Family of
Luther Campbell

Crop sprayer dies in crash

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Charles Aubuchon, 30, a flying crop sprayer, was killed Saturday when his plane ran into some power wires and crashed on a farm in the Black River bottoms about 15 miles south of Poplar Bluff in southeast Missouri.

The Butler County sheriffs's office reported Aubuchon was making his first low pass over the farm of Johnny Slusher about 10:30 a. m. when he hit the power wires and they sheared the cockpit from the plane. Aubuchon was thrown out and the plane crashed and burned.

The crash was about 1½ miles north of the intersection of Missouri 1142 and Butler County Route HH between the towns of Neelyville and Broseley.

Aubuchon's home is in Poplar Bluff and he was a pilot for the Linus Hayes Flying Service at Broseley.

modities. The United States rejected this as unrealistic and unworkable, but has agreed to further studies through the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

—Aid. This is an area of mostly promises. The United States will support a "special action program" to help the very poor countries of Africa and South Asia, but only if the conference ends happily.

The industrialized world now gives about $14 billion in aid to underdeveloped countries with the U.S. share about $4.3 billion, including contributions to international agencies.

The rich countries will make a generalized and unspecific promise to increase the figure and to improve the "quality" of some loans by removing some existing conditions.

—Debts. The industrialized countries are not in complete agreement on the issue. The European Common Market favors a $1 billion program to help poor countries pay off their external debts, but the Carter administration is unsure about this approach because of doubts that Congress would accept it.

The rich countries are of a single mind, however, in totally rejecting a proposed general moratorium on the payments of all such debts.

Richard Cooper, undersecretary of state for economics, says the United States might consider a moratorium on a case-by-case basis, but a general delay is unacceptable.

—Energy. This is not considered one of the crucial areas by the United States, which feels the conference has provided only a useful forum for discussion. The proposals here will deal only with promoting future discussions.

—Investment. This is involves promises of a continuing effort to promote capital investment, but mostly by strengthening existing procedures. The main industrialized goal is to get the poor nations to acknowledge that the development of natural resources must be expanded.

—Trade. This is another secondary issue in the eyes of the rich countries. They will limit themselves to a promise to open markets, but only if theeandtter development of resources.

Night club fire kills 40

SOUTHGATE, Ky. (AP) — A raging fire at a night club killed at least 40 persons Saturday night, a fire official said. He blamed many of the casualties on panic.

Southgate Fire Chief Dick Riesenberg, who gave the death toll, said more persons were trapped inside the building in this Kentucky community across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

Screams could be heard from people trapped inside the two-story Beverly Hills Supper Club, one of the largest night clubs in the Midwest.

The fire chief said the blaze was out of control.

Singer John Davidson, a frequent guest host on television's "Tonight" show, was about to go on stage when the fire broke out. He was reported safe.

One witness counted 15 bodies at the south door of the building where a priest was giving the last rites.

"Everything was under control until the smoke broke out," said Ernie Doctor, 50, of Columbus, Ohio. His wife, Rose, said people began screaming and running for the doors when they spotted the flames.

The fire burned through the Empire Room, where Davidson was to appear. Flames also blazed through adjoining dining rooms.

One patron said a busboy broke up the act of comedians Teter & McDonald and told people there was "a small fire in the kitchen" and for everyone to move out quickly.

Black smoke poured in as the doors were opened and the panic began, witnesses said.

Bartender Gil Broadbeck said, "Suddenly the smoke hit and people began jumping over the bar. It was so thick, I couldn't get a breath a foot above the floor."

The fire broke out about 9 p.m.

Reporters at the scene had to leave their cars and run nearly three miles because of massive traffic snarls as hundreds of firefighters and ambulances poured into the area.

Larry Manfield of Ashland, Ky. a former fire chief at South Point, Ohio, said he was with a group of 80 persons in the Cabaret Room.

"I went around the whole building, looking for members of our group and I only saw a couple. I saw two or three among the bodies. We had just got out of the door when a gust of fire broke out. People were running."

Mrs. Richard Rust and Madonna Braun, doctors' wives, said they were with a party of 30 northern Kentucky doctors in the Viennese Room.

"The bus boys were wonderful," said Mrs. Brown. "I've never seen anything like it."

The club, one of northern Kentucky's prominent gambling casinos before a reform movement drove out the industry in the early 1960s, burned down in 1970, but there were no casualties in that fire.

Following its reopening, the club maintained steady attendance by bringing in name acts such as Pearl Bailey.

The Bank of Sikeston Proves Its Dependability in Living Testimony

In 1895 Clara Vaughn, a 13 year old girl, came to Sikeston. She opened an account with The Bank of Sikeston, and today, 82 years later, Clara Vaughn LaFont, now 94 years old, still has an account with us. Mrs. LaFont was asked why she chose The Bank of Sikeston.

"It was the best bank," she replied. "The most reliable. There were other banks, but this one was always the best. It has been a mighty good bank, or it would not have held up this long and been the success that it is today."

Mrs. LaFont was asked if she was acquainted with C.D. Matthews, the founder of The Bank of Sikeston.

"Yes," she answered. "I have known, and done business with every one of them. I have never found a mistake in my accounts and I watched mighty close for I had to save. I would go over them as soon as I got my statements. They never made a mistake."

We at The Bank of Sikeston are privileged to have this wonderful lady as one of our customers. Her 82 year story, like ours, is the story of Sikeston. And the story of Sikeston is a fascinating saga of industrious people, progressive businesses and economic development. We are proud of our past, and confident in our future.

Dogwood school District is enlarged

May 29, 1917

A special election was held in the Dogwood school district, southeast of Sikeston, last Thursday, at which time parts of other districts were added to its territory and provision made for erecting a new four-room brick school building. The district has had two teachers heretofore, but will hereafter have four and will do high school work. Harry Crouch, who is now working for the H. & H. Grocery, was principal of the Dogwood school last year, and has been re-employed for next year.

At a meeting of the directors of the Southeast Missouri Fair Association last Friday night, arrangements were completed for building a new cattle barn on the local fair grounds. The board also contemplated the erection of a building to be used exclusively for exhibiting automobiles and accessories.

Twenty-nine high school students of Sikeston received their diplomas Monday night. There were 12 boys and 17 girls.

Since school has closed two more of last year's high school teachers, who had been re-elected have resigned. Miss Sora Barth, who taught English, has been offered a position in the schools at her home town of Booneville, and has accepted. W. E. Burnham, who taught science last year, has resigned in order to assist his father on their farm near Armstrong, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Williams and daughter, Rada Lou, of Millersville, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Taylor.

Following the commencement address Monday night by Dr. Umphrey Lee, Supt. Roy V. Ellise presented the awards to honor graduates and winners of awards and brought to a close his 16 years of service in the Sikeston schools with a simple request that he be given the same cooperation as a private citizen that he had been given as a school head. Class honors went to Eleanor Harty and Marvin Rayburn, who were tied for first place, and Eugene Struwe, who was third in the class of 72.

The interior of the Bank of Sikeston is being cleaned this week by the same company from Springfield, Ill., that did the interior work in the bank when it was completed three years ago.

The completed project plan drawn up by Architect Hal Lynch for the proposed high school bleachers to be located on either side of the football field was received this week and is being checked by Lee Bowman, president of the Board of Education and other board members. Plans call for two sets of skeleton bleachers to be located on the north and south side of the present football field. A 15-foot cinder track is to be built around the football field and the entire field enclosed with a link fence six feet high. The estimated cost of the project is $30,968.80.

Amish auction strictly out of this world

WADENA, Iowa (AP) — An Amish auction is something out of this world.

Moses Schrock recently held one. He wanted to leave all his farming equipment behind and move his family from Iowa to northern Missouri to be near relatives.

Many Amish showed up in their horse-drawn buggies. Arriving in cars were some Englishmen — the designation for those who are not of Amish beliefs.

The Amish women and girls were garbed in their traditional long, black dresses, high stockings, tie shoes and bonnets. The men wore blue pants and shirts, and many had black jackets. They wore round, black felt haos. Sons were identical to fathers, but some of the younger ones had blue stocking caps.

Mrs. Schrock — mother of seven boys and one girl — and other women brewed coffee and baked cinnamon rolls to sell to the auction gathering of 150.

Going on the block were milk cans, a rocking chair, a wood-burning stove, horse collars, riding seats for horse-drawn machinery, hand lawnmowers, pump handles, a sickle, hay hooks, rope, wire, a sled and a wringer washer.

In the field were four rows of farm machinery, some of it maybe 100 years old — horse-drawn plows, grain and corn binders, manure spreaders and a thresher.

The auctioneer pointed to an ancient-looking McCormick-Deering thresher and said: "Who'll give $500 for this?" It eventually went for $60.

The last item to go was a team of draft horses. An Amish man got them for $562.

Suddenly, the aution was over. The Englishmen went to their cars, the Amish to their buggies.

The worlds separated once again.

Englishmen once called the yo-yo "the Prince of Wales toy" after King George IV (1820-1830), who spent many hours playing with the yo-yo before he ascended to the throne.

KEEPING BUSY while her husband is globetrotting on official business is no problem for Joan Mondale. The vice president's wife, an avid amateur potter, plans to decorate the vice presidential residence with contemporary American art and crafts.

General's remarks prohibited by Military Code

Could Brown be court-martialed?

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Pentagon legal sources who have reviewed Gen. George Brown's stinging criticism of Congress believe the remarks by America's top soldier may be in violation of military law.

Citing Article 88 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the sources say commissioned officers are prohibited from using "contemptuous words" against the president, the vice president, Congress, and a host of other civilian officials, including, in certain cases, state governors and members of state legislatures.

The article, according to the language of the code, "covers both words which are contemptuous in themselves, such as abusive epithets, denunciatory or contemptuous expressions, or intemperate or malevolent comments upon official or personal acts." The code also holds that the "truth or falsity" of the words "is immaterial."

In May of last year, in his capacity as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Brown told an assembly at the National War College that Congress is like a man kibbutzing a chess match who "occasionally reaches in and moves a piece and thereby screws it up." He also said that Congress had caused "a wreck" in U.S. foreign relations.

The Pentagon attorneys contacted say that under military procedure any soldier of any rank could conceivably bring charges against Brown. Because of the obscurity of Article 88, however, and the unlikelihood that such charges would be considered serious enough for court martial, no one believes the general to be in jeopardy.

Some of the lawyers say they would like to see the charges filed, but not to punish Brown. Many military attorneys think Article 88 is outdated, even unconstitutional, and should be removed from the UCMJ. They say that if Brown were charged with a violation, the publicity "would expose the article's anti-democratic origins."

As so many other of America's military regulations, Article 88 had its origin in the British Articles of War. In that nation it was used to protect "the sacred person of His Majesty." The U.S. adopted the statute in the belief that it would be yet another indication of the concept of civilian control over military forces.

In its two centuries of American history, however, the article has seldom been invoked. Prior to World War II, famed aviator Billy Mitchell was tried for insubordinate activity that included the alleged use of "highly contemptuous and disrespectful" criticism of both his military and civilian superiors. He was convicted.

Also, during the Korean War, Gen. Douglas MacArthur angered the White House with his raw opinions regarding Harry Truman's combat mentality. MacArthur was not court martialed, although some Truman aides believed he could and should have been. Instead, the seething president sacked the general and forced him into retirement.

Dr. Robert Leestamper, president of Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, congratulates Donna Cokenour DeLaney of [illegible] Park Avenue, Sikeston, on graduating with honors at the spring commencement on May 8. She graduated cum laude while completing a Bachelor of Science in Education with a major in elementary education.

Bill to end tax on drugs clears 1st Senate test

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Elimination of the sales tax on prescription drugs and insulin has cleared the Senate Ways and Means Committee, but chances of the House-approved measure ultimately clearing the full Senate remain slim.

The panel unanimously endorsed the $3.4 million measure on Thursday, but it must now go to the powerful Senate Budget Control Committee, which will determine whether the state can afford the bill's price tag, before going to the full chamber.

Meanwhile, the House Economics Committee delayed any action on the controversial "big truck" bill until at least next week. Committee Chairman James Russell, D-Florissant, said the delay was because several committee members were absent from Thursday's meeting.

The sales tax exemption for prescription drugs and insulin would also apply to prosthetic devices like artificial limbs or eyes. House sponsor Bob Feigenbaum, D-St. Louis County, says it is the last piece of tax reform legislation alive this session.

Feigenbaum told the Senate panel it was unfair for persons to be taxed because they are ill, and he pointed out that 35 states have already exempted drugs from the sales tax.

Time is working against ultimate enactment of the bill, however, since it must still clear another Senate Committee and then go to the floor with several dozen other measures ahead of it.

But Senate Democratic Floor Leader John Schneider, D-St. Louus, while acknowledging it would be difficult to obtain the two-thirds vote to insure the bill's consideration, said he would explore other ways of getting it before the full Senate.

The proposal for heavier, longer trucks, which easily cleared the Senate early this year, was sent to the Economics Committee two weeks ago by Speaker Kenneth Rothman over objections of supporters that the move thwarted the will of the House.

Several weeks ago, the House voted to schedule the bill for debate, overturning the decision of its Consumer Protection Committee which had twice defeated it.

Although the bill will not be reported to the full House, should it clear the committee, until there is less than two weeks left in the legislative session, it will go to the top of the schedule of bills to be considered.

The House version of the measure calls for a 30 per cent hike in the fees for the bigger trucks and retention of the 46-foot limit on trailer lengths. But Sen. Norman Merrell, D-Monticello, sponsor of the original bill, says he endorses the House version.

Backers of the measure say it will save fuel and reduce the transportation costs for goods. But critics contend the bigger trucks are unsafe and will tear up state highways, increasing th money needed for road maintenance.

Judge's views on rape draws feminine protest

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A county judge who says rape is a normal reaction from juveniles exposed to provocative clothing in a sexually permissive society is under fire from women demanding his resignation.

Sixty people picketed the city-county building here Thursday, protesting comments made Wednesday by Dane County Judge Archie Simonson in the case of a 16-year-old girl raped by three boys in a school stairwell.

At a disposition hearing for a 15-year-old boy who in January had pleaded no contest to charges of second-degree sexual assault, Simonson said the boy's reaction was understandable.

Complaining about provocative women's clothing, Simonson asked, "Should we punish severely a 15-or 16-year-old who reacts to it normally?"

Asst. Dist. Atty. Meryl Manhardt called the judge's courtroom remarks "particularly sexist." She said the rape was the most serious crime in the history of Madison public schools.

The judge said in an interview Thursday that it was "normal for impressionable juveniles to react violently" to some women's clothing because they are "groping to decide what is proper conduct in this world."

"Their sexual juices really start to flow at 14, 15 and 16," said the 52-year-old judge. "It doesn't take much to provoke the guy. Whether you like it or not, a woman's a sex object and they're the ones who turn the man on, generally."

Simonson found the youth delinquent and ordered him to remain at home for a year under court supervision. The boy must be tutored at home and continue receiving treatment at a nearby youth center.

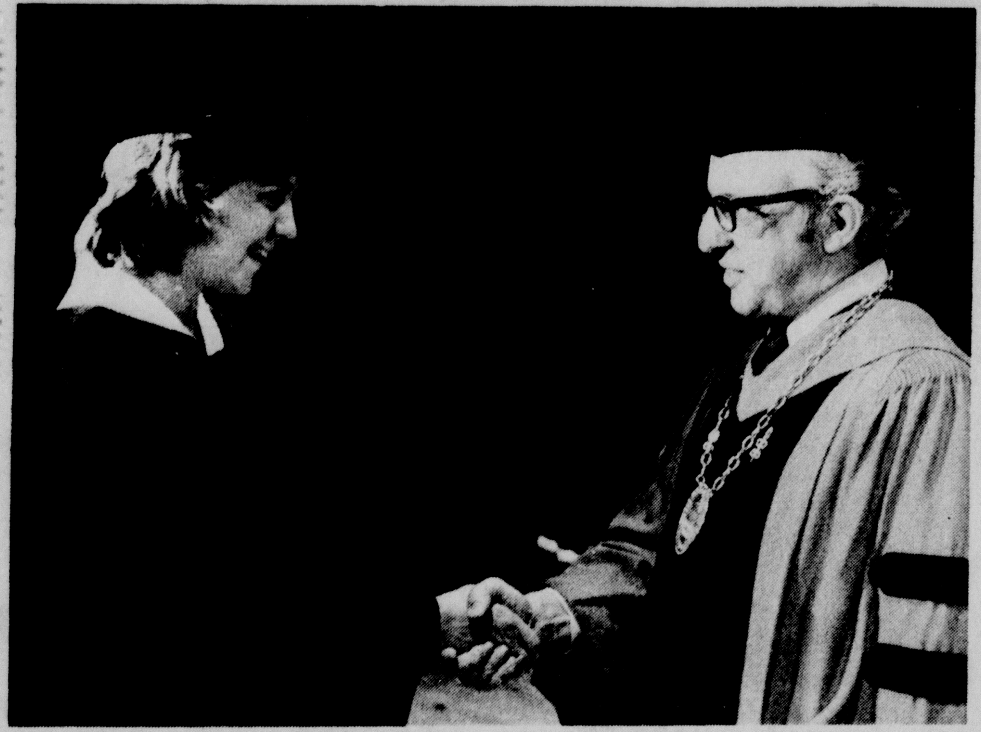
A 14-year-old boy accused in the case was sentenced to one year at a group home in Milwaukee. A third boy was given immunity from prosecution in exchange for testimony against the others.

Simonson said his remarks should not cause women to fear appearing before him in sexual assault cases, but the women protesters disagreed.

"Rape is a violent crime, a terrible crime, and here is a judge calling it a normal reaction," said a statement issued by the protesters, whose action was sponsored by the local chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

"Simonson's usefulness is over as far as his continued judgeship is concerned," NOW said. "What woman would ever believe that she could receive fair treatment from him?"

The protesters, including women dressed in bikinis and parkas, said they objected to Simonson's courtroom remarks, not to the punishment ordered for the youth.



Dr. Robert Leestamper, president of Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, congratulates Brenda Lou Ray of 436 Coleman St., Sikeston, on graduating with honors at the spring commencement on May 8. She graduated cum laude while completing a Bachelor of Science in Education with a major in business education.

Regulations sought against pseudorabies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department officially proposed today federal regulations intended to control the spread of pseudorabies, a serious disease of swine and other livestock.

The proposals include restrictions against the interstate shipment of all livestock — whether swine or other farm animals — that show signs of the disease.

Officials said that livestock that has been infected or exposed to the disease but do not show "clinical signs" of it could be moved with permission directly to slaughter plants. Those animals would have to be identified by distinctive earmarks.

Pseudorabies is also called Aujeszky's Disease, mad itch and infectious bulbar paralysis. It is caused by a virus and primarily affects swine but also can attack cattle, sheep and other livestock.

Officials said that the disease poses no danger to humans, either from contact with infected animals or from eating meat.

The proposed regulation will be open for public comment until July 26. Those can be sent to the Deputy Administrator, Veterinary Services, APHIS, USDA, Federal Building, 6505 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville, Md. 20782.

Pseudorabies has increased sharply in recent years, particularly in the Midwest, where most hogs are produced. There were 714 cases reported last year, compared with 225 in 1975 and 125 in 1974.

Job placements up 18 per cent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri State Job Service announced Thursday it made more than 12,000 job placements during April, an increase of 18 per cent from April 1976.

Joseph E. Dietrich, director of the Division of Employment Security, said that job openings received in local offices statewide, increased 13 per cent from April last year.

Improvement in the economy and job development contacts made by the local job service offices contributed significantly to the increases, Dietrich said.

During April 1977, there were more than 23,000 persons who filed new applications for work with the local offices, Dietrich said.

Major crimes dip 23 per cent

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Major crimes reported by Arkansas law enforcement agencies in March dropped 23 per cent from the same month a year ago, according to the state Criminal Justice and Highway Safety Information Center.

The center said 4,335 major crimes were reported in March, down from 5,661 in March 1976.

It said 448 incidents of violent crimes were reported in March, down from 459 in March 1976. Property crimes also dropped. There were 3,887 reported in March, compared with 5,202 in March 1976.

Statlers write —30— to careers

Mrs. Viola Statler has worked hard during her 25 years at Sikeston High School, whether it was her English classes or working during the afternoons with her journalism students at the Daily Standard. During the paste-up of the last Bulldog Barker for 1976-77, the journalism students, top left photo, presented her with a dozen yellow roses for their thanks and farewell. From left are Bob Lieble, Belinda Milloway, Susan Johnson, Teresa Edwards, Tory Robertson, Tina McCain and Chuck Springs. In the bottom photo Mrs. Statler helps Belinda Milloway, left and Brenda Schuchart work with columns and paste-up of the Barker. (Daily Standard photo)

By JILL CORTI

When the doors of Sikeston High School closed Tuesday for the 1976-77 school year, the Tony Statler's, 703 Mimosa Dr., packed up all their things and walked away too.

Mr. and Mrs. Statler retired after a joint accumulation of over 50 years of service to the Sikeston Public School System, leaving many fond memories behind.

Statler began his teaching after graduation from Southeast Missouri State University. After serving in the armed forces in World War II, he then returned to the University of Missouri at Columbia where he obtained his masters degree.

Prior to coming to the Sikeston school system, Statler taught American History and coached basketball at Diehlstadt.

"We had some pretty good basketball players too, we went to state, never did win it, but it was certainly a good honor."

Among some of Statler's stars were Harold Jones, Robert G. (Bob) Miller and J. D. Schaffer.

In 1951, he became the director of elementary education for the Sikeston school system and served in that position until 1961. It was then, that he began his present job as administrative assistant in charge of transportation and added through the years, positions in audio visual aids attendance records, state reports, school supplies and many other jobs.

During the years in the education profession, Statler noted a tremendous change, "all for the better." "The atmosphere is much more relaxed than in previous years."

Statler recalls that when he first came to the Sikeston, the school system didn't even have a projector to show films with, now, "we have all kinds of audio visual aid equipment, television sets, slide projectors, recorders and even a television station set-up." When he first took over the transportation system, Sikeston had seven to eight buses, now they have 35 buses.

Also in the changes, he noted the attitude of the student body in a whole.

"Today, because, the kids are subject to more media they are looking for and reaching for more. Many wish to continue their education, in comparison to after the war they didn't care so much about education, they just hunted for jobs."

Statler says he has enjoyed his years at his profession "They have been very interesting, stimulating . . . keeps you young by dealing with young people and helps to keep a youthful attitude."

Mrs. Statler is a graduate of Sikeston High School. She attended Southeast Missouri State University where she met her husband. They were married shortly after she graduated from SEMO and she too did graduate work and journalism work at MU.

For 25 years, Mrs. Statler has taught English, worked as sponsor of the school year book and helped with the school newspaper the "Bulldog Barker."

Mrs. Statler and her students have received numerous state and national school newspaper awards and she has had a few of her students pursue a journalism career, including Dick Vaughn, editor of the Delta Magazine.

Vaughn commented that Mrs. Statler was a "creative teacher" compared to those who were of the structured type.

Mrs. Statler, too, has noted during her teaching career many great strides in the school system, teaching techniques and students.

She added that the students are so much more "versatile" now, they have many more talents and opportunities to do more things, like travel.

Mrs. Statler noted the changes in the "Barker" during her years at SHS. She noted that they no longer mimeographed the paper off but in 1954, Charles Blanton Jr. approached her on printing the "Barker" weekly on the old letter press at the Daily Standard.

It wasn't until four years ago that Mrs. Statler and her senior journalism class were seen weekly pasting up and preparing the Barker for press. The "Barker" is published every other week.

Both the Statler's feel a highlight in their teaching careers was in 1956. It was then that they were asked by the Rotary Clubs to sponsor 27 Southeast Missouri teenagers going to Europe.

The 27 teenagers represented 14 different communities from Steele to DeSoto. While in Europe, the Statlers and students lived in various homes of other Rotarians and toured by bus most of Europe.

The Statlers love Sikeston and plan on remaining here at their home. They plan on reading, relaxing, traveling, gardening and visiting Statler's mother who still lives on a farm in Oak Ridge.

Many will miss the Statler's when the school doors open this fall but at least for 25 years they have touched the lives of many in some way.

How to become a counselor

Dear Sir:

I'd like to be a marriage counselor, or teenage counselor of some sort. How does one go about getting started, what kind of training and how long and how much will it cost? I'm really interested in this, and I believe I can help people.

Please answer -- this is important.

DOROTHY

Dear Dorothy:

As you become older, you will learn there are many types of counseling. The most complex of these is marriage counseling. The better marriage counselor needs knowledge in many areas; for example, the many problems involved in sexual matters which requires a vast knowledge of the physical as well as the psychological.

Another field of counseling takes place in school -settings. School counseling is more and more separating into academic counseling, and psychological counseling. . . the guidance department handling the academic problems, and the school psychologist handling the personal non-academic problems (such as suicide, which is second only to car accidents as a cause of death among college students).

Many churches, prisons, business firms, etc. now employ counselors. Most areas require a college degree as a minimum. Certification requirements vary from state to state.

For the present, start working with people in any way that you can. Offer to help in hospitals, homes for senior citizens, working with groups (as scouts), etc. In school, start taking psychology courses, as psychology is basic to all counseling. See your school counselor for more detail in any of the above, plus more. Get involved helping others because after all, that is what counseling is all about.

Best wishes.

Dr. Lloyd T. Dryer
Member, American Psychological Assoc.
Certified (MO.)
School Psycological Examiner;
Staff Psychologist for Mo. So. State College

Dear Dorothy:

In Missouri, there is no licensure for marriage counselors. This type of counseling is usually performed by social workers, sociologists, psychologists, doctors, theologians, or educators who are in private practice, agencies, clinics, etc.

Two ways in which you might work with teenagers are: (1) as a school counselor who assists students with personal, social, educational and vocational goals, (2) as a rehabilitation counselor who works with persons who are physically, socially, or mentally handicapped.

In most states, school counselors must have a master's degree (four to five years) and meet certification requirements. Many states require rehabilitation counselors to pass merit or civil service tests -- a bachelor's degree (three to four years) is minimal.

Annual tuition at four-year colleges and universities in Missouri ranges from approximately $300 in some state institutions to $3700 at one private university. Room and board varies from $900 to $1700. Books, personal expenses, and transportation will be additional costs.

The Occupational Outlook Handbook, college guides, and various resource materials are available in libraries. These should help you to expand your knowledge of other jobs relating to your interests and find schools offering the appropriate background.

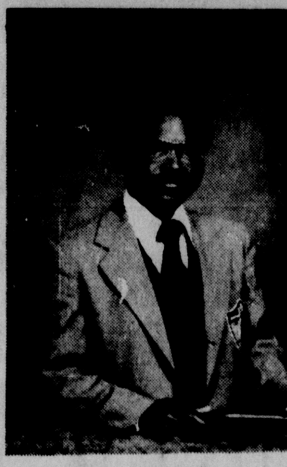
Ask the Pastor

Is rock-n-roll bad?



Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: My grandmother tells me that it is wrong to listen to Rock n Roll music, as a Christian, because it's bad for me morally and physically. At first I just laughed at her, but after reading your column and see your intelligent advice, I thought that I should ask you about it. What do you think? - Sue.

Dear Sue: People who present this music usually have bad moral characters and the influence in which they publish this music is usually under dope. Even the words of the songs encourage young people to do that which is against God's moral law, and this causes much guilt and shame to both individual and family and helps to crowd already over-filled mental hospitals.

Now, about the physical damage, not only loud music, but many home appliances cause noise pollution which causes many to go deaf.

Noise in our homes is reaching levels that can injure the human ear! Prolonged exposure to even the quieter of our modern appliances may interfere with hearing, speech, and sleep.

The risk of hearing damage rises as clothes washers, food mixers, dishwashers, vacuum cleaners, and electric knives continue to bombard us with noise. Sewing machines, food blenders, electric shavers, and food grinders are even worse. And the highest noise lovels in the home are produced by appliances which include about 4 million electric yard-care tools and 12 million electric shop tools.

For a quieter home try noise-absorbing materials on floors; use heavier drapes over windows facing loud outdoor noises; try rubber or plastic treads on uncarpeted stairs; put sound-absorbing ceiling tile in your kitchen; substitute the less-vibrating wood cabinets for the noiser metal ones; use a foam pad under blenders and mixers; install dishwashers with insulation and vibration mounts; get exercise with a hand-powered lawn mower insted of a noisy power mower; keep the volume down on your hi-fi and use a headset if others are not interested in listening; place air conditioners where their hum can help mask objectional noises, but don't face them toward your neighbor;'s bedroom; avoid noisy toys when buying for your children; and, finally, when buying an appliance compare the noise outputs of different makes before you make your purchase. For more information, check the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C. 20460.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I read your column every week and am very pleased that the Lord sent you to our country. I know what you say is the truth, but a friend of mine who is a preacher says that we do not need to believe in the Old Testament. He points out that we can eat whatever we feel like eating, because even though the Old Testament says some animals are unclean, God told Peter in the New Testament to slay and eat of the animals he saw in his vision. What do you say about that? - Rodney.

Dear Rodney: As I have said before, because a man says he is a preacher does not mean that he knows what is right or does what is right. Some preachers will know what the Bible says, but because they want to be popular, they tell a bunch of lies. For example, some say the Ten Commandments are nailed to the cross; the Sabbath is for the Jews; you can't live a holy life; the Old Testament is not for Christians - all these are lies, and these preachers are called by the Bible, false prophets. I am not here to be popular, but to help you to live right, and help to save your soul.

In 2 Timothy 3:16, 17, which by the way is a New Testament book, God says: "ALL SCRIPTURE is given by inspiration of God. . ." It did not say the New Testament, but ALL Scripture - from Genesis to Revelation, or the entire Bible.

There is nothing in the Old or the New Testament to show that unclean animals have been cleansed, no, not even the vision given to the apostle Peter. In fact, the apostle quickly discovered that his vision did not refer to foods at all but to people instead.

This surprised disciple of Christ was made to realize that no one, regardless of race or nationality, was to be thought of as unclean and unwelcomed as the Jews believed about anyone who was not an Israelite! And when Cornelius was sent by the Lord to the apostle, he would not have been received by Peter, a Jew, if God had not prepared the way by that vision. Hebrew prejudice was fierce - much the same as today. But when prejudiced Peter understood God's purpose in giving that vision, he welcomed Cornelius as a brother and put his guest as ease with the words "God hath... (showed) me that I should not call any man common or unclean" (Acts 10:28).

Even when fellow Jews chided Peter for receiving Gentiles into his house and eating with them, they "glorified God" when they heard the story of that vision and understood that by God's grace even Gentiles become brothers in Christ (read Acts 11:1-18). Meantime, forget it not, unclean foods are still unclean until the end of time (Rev. 18:2).

The Pastor speaks
Christian joy

Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright

By The REV. DR.
ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT

A spiritual awakening always comes with a rebirth of what the early Christians called "the joy of the Lord." Joy is the second gift of the Holy Spirit named by St. Paul in Galatians 5:22-23. Christian love is named first, . . . then joy.

We desperately need a rebirth of this joy in our serious and often joyless generation. We find so much sadness, cynicism, skepticism, injustice and bitterness.

Light shone in the darkeness of the early days of frontier Methodism through the luminous joy of Bishop Francis Asbury and his circuit riding ministers. Singing and preaching their joyous songs and messages of Christian love, hope, assurance, and peace, a new spirit was released in their assemblies due to the gift of spreading the experience of "abundant living" – the joy of being.

Thank God, again today the note of celebration marks the stirrings of new life in more vital worship and loving concern in the church.

The "Good News" of God's saving and keeping grace that gives joy can and does turn despair into gratitude and it speaks with the authority of experience.

Nutrition

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, MO 65101.

Q. My family likes desserts and I feel concerned because the things they ask for most often are rich, fattening foods like cake and pie. Am I correct in thinking that desserts of this kind are unhealthful?

A. There are good reasons for feeling that rich desserts are unhealthful. Besides providing a lot of sugar and fat that we otherwise wouldn't eat they usually do not contribute significant amounts of important vitamins and minerals. Probably their most damaging feature, however, is the extra calories they add to meals which can be transformed into body fat.

Many dessert foods belong in the same class as candy, soft drinks and alcoholic beverages from the standpoint of adding "empty calories" to diets. All of these things have strong taste appeal to many people and therefore can be consumed after hunger feelings have been satisfied.

For example, a nutritious meal of green salad, lean meat, cooked vegetable, whole wheat bread and milk could readily provide one third or more of the energy and essential nutrients needed for a day. If a generous serving of rich cake or pie were added to the meal, an excess of 300 calorie or more could easily be consumed. A continuous intake of this amount of unneeded energy each day for a month could be expected to result in 2½ lbs. of new body fat, which in a year could accumulate to about 30 lbs. of excess weight.

A good argument can be made for completely omitting rich desserts from the diet. If your family has the dessert habit, serving small portions will help remove some of its negative influence.

The food value of desserts depend on the things they are made of. Milk, nuts, raisins and other fruits will add nutrients to desserts. Sometimes less fat and sugar can be used than is called for. Angelfood cake, which contains protein-rich whites of eggs as a major ingredient, is higher in protein and lower in fat and calories than other popular kinds of cake. As one might expect, adding frosting or whipped topping can greatly increase aalories (by 50 percent, in some cases).

A. No, since candy is usually more concentrated in energy than desserts, and usually contains little else of food value, while desserts can be quite nutritious. Fresh fruit is a good choice for a meal finale since fruits are sources of needed vitamins, minerals and healthful fiber. In addition, they ususally are very low in fat and tend to be low in energy value.

Fresh strawberries are in season and are an example of a healthful, low calorie fruit. A full cup of berries contains only 55 Calories and supplies about double the adult requirement for vitamin C (90 milligrams). Other healthful fruits that will be in good supply as the summer progresses include peaches, blueberries, apricots, plums, melons, etc.

Sugar should be added to fruit sparingly since one tablespoon contains 46 Calories. Since we acquire a preference for sweetness as a matter of habit, most people find they can adjust to less sugar in foods in a relatively short time.

Cheese or ice cream go well with fresh fruit, and no sugar should be needed. Note that ice cream is quite rich in energy (a cup contains 250 Calories).

Mixing different kinds of fruit creates interesting flavors, and usually makes sweetening unnecessary. Strawberries, oranges and bananas make a good combination. A little experimenting should provide other tasteful mixtures. Two USDA bulletins are available with recipes and ideas for family meals, one on fruit (MP 399) and the other on vegetables (MP 427). Contact your local University Extension Center, or write to the address above for a copy of each.

Age of Extra Crispy

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every age seems to have its symbol. The Stone Age, the Space Age, the Ice Age, and of course the 1970s -- the age of the Extra-Crispy.

I swear if I hear one more commercial where someone bites into a piece of chicken, a corn chip, or a fish stick and makes a noise like an 85-foot redwood just fell, I'm going to climb the wall.

It has taken me 20 unfulfilling years to get my kids to close their mouths when they chew food. The other night, a commercial showed a man with dentures bite into an apple so hard, I half expected to see him dribble teeth down his shirt front. As the apple sloshed and bubbled in his mouth, he opened it to reveal the contents and said, "I'll bet you wish you could do this."

"I'll say," said my son.

"He meant with false teeth," I said.

"I'd like to do that with any teeth."

Just then another commercial came on of a kid eating breakfast cereal. He trickled a little milk over it and I came right out of my chair. I have been to quieter wars. I watched mesmerized as a postman walking his beat heard the noise, came in, and poured himself a bow. So did a plumber who was working the next town. By the end of the commercial, there were about 15 people standing around the kitchen seeing how they could break one another's eardrums.

It bothers me more and more that we measure freshness by the racket it makes. If a cracker doesn't make your ears ring when you snap it, forget it. If a potato chip doesn't have you reading lips, get rid of them. If someone snapping a piece of bacon in your ear doesn't make your eyes bug out, it'll never make it to the table.

One night I was watching the tube when a woman with blue eyes looked straight at me and asked, "Have you listened to your laundry lately?" She pulled apart a blanket that sounded like a drum roll.

"Yes," I yelled back. "Mine said to me just the other day, 'Pick me to iron! Pick me!'" If there's one thing I don't need it's static from my laundry.

I liked it better when commercials relied on pure ecstasy to sell a product. Remember? They used to take a breath mint, roll it around in their mouth, roll their eyes back until you could see the whites and break out into a smile. That's not enough anymore. Toilet paper has to swoosh . . . biscuits have to dance and giggle . . . butter has to carry on a conversation. . . and colas have to come in like the tide at the Bay of Fundy.

My kids are so conditioned by television that the other night, one of them slipped out into the kitchen and attacked a freshly baked cake. In doing so, it slipped off the counter top and crashed to the floor, breaking the plate. Out of the darkness I heard a voice say, "Now, that's freshness!"

Yacht is derived from the Dutch "yaght" — a chasing ship — and the word surfaced in England about the mid-16th century. The first yacht club on record was the Cork Harbour Water Club, founded 1720.

Dear Ann Landers

When should couples bring children to dinner

Dear Ann: We are a childless couple (by choice), and our home is not child-oriented. Two couples have ruined recent visits for us by including toddlers and pre-schoolers in late dinner invitations, when they knew that we are not set up for entertaining young children.

When they go out to a restaurant they get a babysitter, but when it's just to someone's house, they don't bother. The visits were totally child-dominated and adult conversation was impossible.

I've always heard that a good social rule is to assume children are NOT invited unless they are specifically included. Please comment. Sign me -- Not Running A Day Care Center

Dear Not Running: I agree with you.

By now, you know who the offenders are. If you invite them again, tell them it's an adults-only evening and to please make arrangements to leave the children at home.

Dear Ann Landers: I am one of the many hotel telephone operators who work at a big metropolitan hotel, and our switchboards are always very busy.

During certain periods of the day we are run crazy with all the lines going at once. It's impossible to take long messages. Yet some people think we are social secretaries. They give us "messages" as long as letters.

Why don't they realize there are other callers besides themselves? It is impossible to give good service if ten calls are waiting and one person takes too long.

Dozens of hotel operators will be grateful if you will ask the public to show a little consideration. And please, if it takes us a while to answer a call, don't say, "Oh, you're there! I thought all of you had died." -- Griped

Dear G.: Here's your letter but don't expect it to change anything. Some people are impatient, demanding and sarcastic an they take out their frustrations on the first person they talk to -- which in many instances is you.

Dear Ann Landers: I realize you have problems greater than this one, but I've been bugged by something for a long time and would appreciate an answer.

What is the proper social procedure for entering a revolving door when a man and a woman are together?

Should the man allow the woman to enter first and then push from the rear or should he enter first and make the pushing easier for her?

Please help me. Every time I see a revolving door, I run the other way. -- Mr. O From New York

Dear New York: The man goes first. He should, however, say something -- such as, "Pardon me for going ahead but I'll do the pushing."

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Rufus changed his lifestyle at age 70. Instead of chasing around after women, he went speeding around in his new car.

The car had been advertised as having more power than Tyrone, and, unfortunately, it also had more power than Rufus could handle. While cruising along a highway at 115 m.p.h., he was unable to slow down in time to avoid crashing into the rear of Hida's automobile -- which had been proceeding in front of his car at a legal rate of speed -- and he bounced her and her automobile into a roadside haystack.

Emerging from the wreckage looking like the Scarecrow from the Wizard of Oz, Hilda blamed the accident on the manufacturer of the car and sued the manufacturer for her multiple injuries.

"To produce a vehicle that can go over 100 m.p.h.," she charged in court, "is pure negligence. In the hands of an irresponsible driver, it can be as lethal as a machine gun. And to compound its negligence, the manufacturer encouraged the buyer to go fast by promoting the high speed capabilities of its cars."

"We make automobiles," responded the manufacturer, "and not the rules of the road. If a person wants to speed, that's his business and not ours. We're manufacturers, not our brother's keeper."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the manufacturer liable for Hilda's injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that the manufacturer of an automobile is not required to make it impossible for a motorist to break the law. Speed limits are posted and the obligation to obey them is upon the motorist. And, concluded the judge, if a manufacturer has the right to make cars that are capable of high speeds -- which right the manufacturer has -- the manufacturer also has the right to advertise his merchandise accordingly.

Advance planning pays when traveling by air

Associated Press Writer

Travelers have a wider-than-ever variety of air fares and travel packages to choose from this summer, but figuring out which one is best can be harder than finding your way around a strange city.

Advance planning — and paying — can cut costs considerably. The round-trip air fare between New York and London can range from $259 to $1,312 for example. But there are restrictions attached to most of the bargains, so it pays to know exactly what you want and when you want it.

The biggest boom has come in charter flights, with some industry sources estimating that 30 per cent of all trans-Atlantic travel this year will be on charter flights. Ten years ago, only 5 per cent of the flights were charters.

Lower prices also are available on regularly scheduled flights under excursion plans involving limits on the amount of time you spend at your destination and, in some cases, requiring payment well in advance.

For excursion fares within the United States, you generally have to stay 7-30 days, buy your ticket two weeks in advance and pay extra if you fly on the weekend.

Excursion fares to Europe are usually available for stays of 14-21 days and 22-45 days. With one exception, you do not have to pay in advance. There is no penalty for cancellation; weekends cost extra.

The exception is the "APEX" fare which allows you to stay 22-45 days and is lower than the regular 22-45 day excursion. In exchange for the savings, you must buy your ticket 45 days before departure. There is a penalty for cancellation, although you can take out low-cost insurance for about $15 to protect yourself against this possibility.

OTC — The letters stand for one-stop tour charters and the flights have been operating since 1975. You must purchase the ticket from a travel agent. The package includes air fare, ground accommodations and some services such as a guided tour. You have to buy your ticket 15 days in advance for flights in North America and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is a minimum stay of four days, three nights in North America and seven days, six nights, elsewhere. There is no refund if you cancel.

ITC — Inclusive tour charters, which are often described as "vacation packages." They include air fare, ground accomodations and services and stops in three cities at least 50 miles apart. You do not have to buy your ticket in advance, but you must stay at least seven days. If you do pay in advance, you may face a penalty for cancellation; it depends on the tour operator. The ITC fares are higher than the OTC packages because there are fewer restrictions.

ABC — Advance booking charters are the newest type on the market, authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board late last year. They allow you to purchase air fare only under a charter plan and are ideal if you want to stay with friends or shop around for your own hotel. There is no minimum stay required for ABCs in the United States; if you want to go to Europe, you have to stay seven days. You must buy your ticket 45 days in advance for Europe and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is no penalty for cancellation if the tour operator can find a substitute passenger to take your place.

TGC — Travel group charters may include transportation only or may be offered as part of a package with land arrangements. There is a minimum stay of 7 or 10 days required, depending on where you are going, and you must buy your ticket 60 days in advance. There is no cancellation penalty.

Another common type of package is the one based on the GIT (group inclusive tour) fare. This is not a charter; you travel on regularly scheduled flights. The GIT fares require a group of 40 persons or more, but you do not have to put together the group or join an organization. Payment dates, minimum stay and ground accomodations included with the air fare may vary from tour to tour.

Missouri FAIR plan among best providing insurance to inner city

The Missouri Property Insurance Placement Facility, which provides insurance to 36,000 property owners in high-risk areas, has been ranked among the best of the country's so-called FAIR (Fair Access To Insurance Requirements) Plans.

Of the country's 29 FAIR Plans, Missouri's ranks ninth in providing the lowest premium cost to homeowners, insuring some $500,000,000 worth of high-risk properties mostly in the inner-cities.

"Since our inception in 1969, we have paid out $29,107,000 in claims, and contributed $656,235 in taxes that went into Missouri's general fund," said Russell E. Fink, mannager of Missouri's Property Insurance Placement Facility.

Fink commented that the Missouri FAIR Plan was able to keep the rates fairly low by carefully scrutinizing its operating, loss-adjustment, and other expenses, adding that, "This has allowed a greater share of the premium dollar to be available for payment of claims."

Missouri FAIR Plan policies provide individuals with property coverage, allowing them to qualify for bank loans, that in turn enable them to rejuvenate and maintain their homes, businesses and neighborhoods.

The 395 insurance companies participating in Missouri's FAIR Plan, spread the risk among themselves. When a policy holder makes a claim under the FAIR Plan, each insurance company contributes only a fraction of the monetary claim amount.

By spreading the risk participating insurance companies not only decrease the amount of claims among themselves, but also cut the heavy burden of paying the entire amount to the FAIR Plan policyholder.

In 1968, the Missouri legislature hoped that the FAIR Plan would meet its goal of providing insurance for all deserving applicants. In 1977 it does just that.

Some of the more interesting cases that provide examples of the Missouri FAIR Plan's response to the public's needs are listed below:

Consider the city leaders in New Madrid, Missouri, who found themselves without insurance on their municipality properties when the 30 day non-renewal notice from their previous carrier expired and they had not yet obtained insurance. The Missouri FAIR Plan bound the values immediately and kept the insurance in force under binder until such time as a policy could be provided in the conventional market place.

Look at the producer in Kansas City who called asking for assistance when the insurance on a $3,000,000 inner-city apartment project was about to expire and they couldn't obtain coverage in the conventional market. The Missouri FAIR Plan bound coverage on the property and has since issued a policy.

Or ask the principals involved in an Urban Homestead Development in Kansas City, who came to their assistance when insurance was needed on dwellings being rehabilitated for sale to qualified low-income families. The Missouri FAIR Plan provided this necessary insurance.

"A glance at Missouri's FAIR Plan proves its availability, demand and need," said Fink. "It's the key to revitalizing and re-establishing our neighborhoods and businesses within the city."

For more information on Missouri's FAIR Plan, write Russell E. Fink, manager, the Missouri Property Insurance Placement Facility, Room 730, Pierce Bldg., 112 N. Fourth St., St. Louis, MO 63102 or call (314) 421-0171.

Missouri claims 3.4 million phones

Only a baker's dozen countries in the world have more telephones than the state of Missouri.

That bit of gee-whizzery was discovered by Mary Harbert, Southwestern Bell manager, shen she let her fingers do the walking through the new, but year-old, edition of "The World's Telephones" recently issued by the AT&T Company.

Missouri's 3.4 million phones outstrip all but 13 of the 42 countries claiming 500,000 or more phones each. Mexico is about a half million short of the Show-Me state, while Greece is more than a million behind.

Harbert said it takes a year to gather, compile and publish the statistics from telephone administrations and companies around the world. That's why they reflect the count to January 1, 1976.

"The leaders haven't changed in years," Harbert said. "The United States is still way out front with 149 million phones. Japan is second with 45.5 million and the United Kingdom third with 21 million.

"Washington, D. C., still has more telephones than people -- more than 140 per 100 population -- which may interest psychologists who delve into the ways of bureaucracy."

Avoid those piping hot foods, scalding tea and coffee and heavy liquor intake. They may cause changes in your mouth that could lead to cancer. Don't forget a regular dental checkup since it's easy for your dentist to spot oral cancer. When treated very early, oral cancer is usually curable, says the American Cancer Society.

Common stocks at a relative stalemate

By CORCKETT SCOTT

"There is no better ballast for keeping the mind steady on its keel . . . than business."

... James Russell Lowell

A Mid-South entreprenuer is doing well as owner of a mobile home business and a men's clothing store, the latter selling very expensive high styled top branded merchandise.

His investments in the stock market consist primarily of modest holdings in General Motors. Schering Plough and IBM.

"Selling mobile homes to a carefully screened clientele has been a highly profitable experience," he relates; "because there is little competition --- to date-- from speculative new home construction within the price area young families can afford.

"And by stocking fine apparel in my small town men's store with labels one would expect to find only in big cities, I find that the store is drawing business from many of the neighboring communities, as well as from my immediate trade territory."

Common stocks, he indicated, never have interested him like his two divergent and prospering busineeses.

"I may pick up some additional shares of Schring Plough," he comments; "because I believe it is a fine organization and the stock is way down in the thirties.

"IBM and GM sppear to be good long term holdings, though I probably won't buy any additional shares of either at this time."

Like so many thousands of small investors in the stock market throughout the nation, this businessman's appraisal and analysis -- and interest -- (or lack of interest in the market currently) -- is contributing to the relative stalemate in common stocks.

Much of the selling in common stocks already has taken place and shares of a great many fine companies are in strong hands "who do no neet the money" and thus are not forced to sell.

Their interest in future acquisitions is confined pretty much to good quality common stocks which appear to be on the bargain counter, like Schering Plough, for instance.

A Memphis Securities Exchange Commission registered investment analyst reminds that Schering-Plough moved up to the mid-sixties in 1975; and held above 60 for a time last year — easing to the low forties in contrast to the present price in the low thirties.

He also spoke of investor interest in the firm's future prospects, as well as the fact of its apparent bargain counter price.

Schering-Plough's product, Garamycin, which accounts for nearly one-half the firm's profits, is a top entry in the field of aminoglycosides, he said.

The Memphis analyst said Plough's Garamycin recently had been approved for winder usage in Japan. And Japan, he noted, is the top world market for antibiotics.

Schering Plough's earnings growth rate has declined in recent years, and this, the Memphis broker mentioned, contributed to the stock's depreciation, along with generally bad markets.

Another factor, he said, has been foreign currency devaluations.

The Memphis broker also spoke of another pharmaceutical equity likely to do better in the future.

It is Abbott Laboratories, and is trading in the low forties, down from a 1976 high of 55, with net for fiscal 1977 expected around $3.75 per share.

Growth in earnings for Abbott has averaged about 15 per cent a year since the early seventies, says the Memphis analyst; and with medically oriented equity having great potential, he sees the stock as a good buy for longterm holding.

The firm is a leader, he said, in highly technical specialties, including fluid systems, intravenous solutions and in medical needs in other areas such as venipuncture instruments.

Abbott is well-known in diagnostic instruments as well, and in pediatric products. The common stock is rated "A" by Standard & Poor's.

Herbicides are suggested for soybean post emergence

By JOE H. SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE — Most of our crops in the Bootheel are fairly clean but with an extended period of showers this situation could change.

We usually have problems with cocklebur, velvetlead (wild cotton) and other broadleaf weeds from now to harvest.

We have several herbicides that we suggest as postemergence treatments for soybeans.

Dinoseb (dinitro) can be used as an early treatment after the weeds emerge but before the soybeans have passed the cotyledon stage, that is before the first leaves open exposing the terminal bud. This treatment requires exact timing and even emergence of soybeans and weeds. Cocklebur, velvet leaf, morningglory, small pigweed, small seedling grasses and other weeds that emerge just before or with the crop can be controlled with this treatment.

Apply 2¼ lbs. of active ingredient when temperature is 75 degrees F to 85 degrees F when the foliage and soil is dry. Dinoseb can also be applied as a directed postemergence spray from the time soybeans are 5 to 6 inches tall up to first bloom. Use 1.5 to 3 pounds of active ingredient per acre. A surfactant will improve kill on grass seedlings.

Direct the spray to keep it off the soybean plants as much as possible. Dinoseb must not be applied higher than ½ the height of the soybean plant.

Naptalam + Dinoseb (Dyanap and others) This combination has been used for some time as a preemergence treatment up through the cracking and crook stage.

Dyanap now has a label for an overtop treatment when soybeans are in second trifoliate stage and before soybeans start blooming. Use two quarts per acre on three-inch or smaller cocklebur, annual morningglory and jimson weed. Use four quarts if weeds are three- six inches tall. Do not spray when soybean foliage is wet.

Bentazon (Basagran) has been an effective herbicide on cocklebur, velvet leaf and some other annual broadleaf weeds. It is most effective when cocklebur are in two - six leaf stage and velvet leaf is in two- four leaf stage. Larger weeds can be killed but will need a higher rate. Complete coverage of weeds is necessary for optimum control. See special label instructions for control of yellow nutsedge and morningglory.

Two-four-DB (Butyrac, Butoxone, etc.) can be used as a directed spray when soybeans are eight inches tall and weeds are smaller than beans. Use the amine form of two, four- DB. Apply 0.2 pounds - A acid equivalent for cockleburs. Use sufficient water for good coverage of weeds. Avoid treating higher than lower one-third of the soybean plant. Do not spray drought stressed soybeans or beans showing symptoms of phytophthora root rot. 2,4-DB can also be used as an overtop treatment when cocklebur or ivyleaf morningglory or both will likely reduce yield or have formed a canopy over the soybeans.

Use no more than 0.2 lb-A of the amine form. Apply when first buds start to form and until mid bloom. Soybeans should be healthy. Follow all precautions in keeping off cotton and other susceptible crops.

Early postemergence control important

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Early application of postemergence weed control treatments is a key factor in weed control in crops grown in this area. A major weed control problem in the area results from the fact that farmers are so busy about this time of year that herbicides are often applied later than they whould be for best results.

Consequently, weeds get off to a good start and are much more difficult to control. Crop yields are reduced by weed competition, and crops are often damaged in the process of controlling the weeds which increase yield losses tremendously.

The importance of early-season weed control is shown by results of soybean weed control research conducted in Arkansas during recent years. In research trials in which cocklebur infestations were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cockleburs were controlled within four weeks after the beams came up. After this time, yield reductions increased rapidly until the beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield loss at this stage.

In soybeans, Dinoseb (Dinitro) can be used as an early postemergency ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeds that comes up with the soybeans. Most broadleaved weeds are controlled by this herbicide. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant.

Dinoseb is a contact killer; therefore, it will only control those weeds that are up at the time of application.

Bentagon (Basagran), applied as a topical (over-the-top) treatment is effective in controlling cocklebur and other annual broadleaf weeds including ragweed, smartweed, and velvetleaf with little or no damage to soybean plants.

It is most effective on very small weeds (two to three-leaf stage) that are actively growing. Considerably less herbicide is needed for good control at this stage which reduces the cost considerably in comparison to the cost of later treatments.

The effective use of these early treatments results in early- season weed control before weeds have had a chance to reduce bean yields significantly. In addition, it creates a size differential between soybean plants and later-season weeds so that weeds can be effectively controlled with directed herbicide applications. Consequently, later- season weeds can be controlled with much less damage to soybean plants andyields as compared to late- season topical herbicide treatments.

Now as far as cotton is concerned, two herbicides are recommended for early topical (over-the-top) postemergence application when weeds are as tall as the cotton. Flometuron (Cotoran or Lanex) plus a surfactant gives fair control of a number of grasses and broadleaved weeds. For best results, it should be applied after cotton is three inches tall and preferably before weeds are 1½ inches tall.

DSMA plus a surfactant, applied within 10 days after cotton comes up and when weeds are less than two inches tall will give fair to good control of most grasses broadleaved weeds. Now, if the weeds are not as tall as the cotton, directing the spray from the side of the row will help to insure best weed control results with less damage to the cotton.

For corn and grain sorghum, Atrazine applied as an early, postemergence treatment will result in good control of most broadleaved weeds and fair control of grasses. For best results, it should be applied when weeds are not more than 1½ inches tall. If weeds are up at the time of application, a crop oil that is designated for use with Atrazine should be added to the Atrazine- water spray mixture for corn but not for grain sorghum as oil will damage sorghum.

Ag banker outlines farm credit problems

COLUMBIA — One of the nation's top authorites on agricultural banking outlined some of the trends and problems of farm credit before 33 bankers attending the Advanced School of Agricultural Banking meeting May 22-27 at the University of Missouri- Columbia.

Leslie Peterson, chairman of the agricultural banking division of the American Bankers Ass., said the flow of capital supplied by banks and other sources has and will continue to have more impact on agriculture than other important influences. These other influences on agriculture include government, farm labor unions, consumer groups, foreign investors and the growth of enrollment in colleges of agriculture.

"Banks are actually holding their own at a little over one half of the farm operating credit extended in this country," Peterson said. The banks' share of farm credit outlays is growing, he added, with other sources of credit being the Production Credit Associations, commercial credit corporations and the farmers Home Administration. Peterson is also president of the Farmers State Bank in Trimont, Minn.

Outlining current problems in farm credit, Peterson said, "We're seeing loan repayment ability declining." More bankers are reporting that, while the money supply is good, "they have borrowers in trouble and can't extend more credit."

Peterson pointed to a U.S. Department of Agriculture survey in a nine-state drouth area in the Midwest, with up to 18 per cent of farmers having problems paying back loans. (Missouri was not a part of the study.)

This problem is one of the reasons that the Carter administration has improved price support proposals, Peterson said.

Bankers are also "becoming a little complacent," he said. While real estate value may be high on rural property, "we haven't looked hard enough at repayment capacity.

"We find lenders willing to place more debt on land than that land has productive capability to service," Peterson said.

Another possible problem arises from the fact that the agricultural area as a healthy field for investment is attracting big banks and life insurance companies not traditionally in the field.

"However, many of these (new lenders) don't understand agriculture and they don't understand the perpetual credit needs in agriculture."

He referred to the cattle business in the depressed year of 1975 when many new investors not used to agriculture got out because they had been "burned."

"We can't have lenders who are going to get in and out of this (on a short term basis) if we're going to look for any any stability or growth."

Noting that most banks that extend farm credit are small, with individualized relations with farmers, and that these banks are "the short-term lenders and down-payment lenders," Peterson listed some questions that farm lenders and borrowers should ask themselves in loan decisions:

--"Have you exhausted the entire profit potential in the current operation?" Existing assets should be used to the maximum before any additional investments are made.

--"Do you have the management ability for the expanded operation?" Peterson said farms often develop into complex operations, and farmers then may feel overwhelmed by the decisions they have to make. Bankers have to help farmers make such crucial decisions, he said.

--"Will the proposals be profitable? Can you project it out on paper? Can the farmer avoid a cash-flow bind?"

--What is the "riskability" of the proposal? How much risk is the lender and the farmer willing to take?

Peterson pointed out that agriculture, "the single largest industry" in the U.S., is a vital force in the economy.

Experts plead for Endrin

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Experts on insect pests which destroy small grain crops pleaded that the use of the pesticide endrin not be prohibited when there are infestations of army cutworms and caterpillars known as pale western cutworms.

"The risk of not having endrin is too great, particularly when it is needed to fight the pale western cutworm," said Phillip H. Marvin, an entomologist and private crop consultant at Lincoln, Neb.

"It must be available to farmers. A large infestation could be the final straw in forcing farmers into bankruptcy after drought conditions," he said.

Marvin was a witness at a hearing before a panel from the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Its members are seeking information on how the pesticide can be used without damaging fish, wildlife and humans. Laboratory tests have shown that it can cause cancer in rats even in small doses.

The EPA's move to put heavy restrictions on the use of endrin or ban it entirely was triggered by extensive fish kills when it was used in 1976 in south-central Kansas and adjoining Oklahoma.

A member of the hearing panel from Washington, D.C., Kyle Barbehenn, opened the hearing with an assurance that the EPA has not already determined that endrin will be banned.

"If the risks can be reduced, the balance between risks and benefits may be altered and it can be used.," he said. "Hopefully, we can find some middle ground."

Dr. Wayne Berndt, an extension specialist for South Dakota State University, said that state's small grain farmers particularly need endrin because it is the only pesticide which is effective against cutworms and caterpillars in the cool months when thev usually appear.

Feed wheat, save $3 a hog

COLUMBIA — Hog producers should be able to save about $3 per hog this year by feeding wheat or a wheat- corn mix totheir animals, according to John Rea and Myron Bennett, extension specialists at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"An unusual price relationship between corn and wheat is expected during the wheat harvest," says Bennett, state extension economist. "The price of wheat may be 10 or 15 cents below corn. Wheat with garlic or other foreign matter causing discounts will be much lower."

"Subsituting wheat for corn without reducing the rate of gain potentially reduces feed costs. That increases net income," says Rea, extension swine specialist.

The UMC specialists say now is the time for farmers to prepare for this advantage.

"Take for instance a grower ration (for young pigs)," Rea says. "At current prices, an all-corn ration will cost about $6.10 per hundredweight. Corn with about 40 per cent wheat will bring that down to $5.60 per hundredweight. An all-wheat ration will run about $5.08," Rea says.

There's about a 50 cents difference per hundredweight between all-corn and the corn-wheat mix, and between the corn-wheat mix and the all-wheat ration both in developer and finisher rations, also. (Developer rations are for hogs of intermediate weights; finisher is the ration used prior to marketing.)

"Now, let's assume the all-corn and corn-wheat rations both have a feed conversion of 3.5 pounds of feed to produce a pound of pork. So, by feeding the corn-wheat ration, a farmer can save about $1.75 per hundred pounds gained. Assuming a hog gains about 180 pounds from weaning to market weight, that means about a savings of $3.15 per hog with a corn-wheat mix," Rea says.

Rea says his figures assume the feed conversion on the all-wheat ration is about 4 pounds of feed to a pound of gained weight on a pig. "The all-wheat diet is cheaper, but it may take more feed per pound of gain.

"We figure it costs about $34.65 to put 180 pounds on a hog with an all-corn ration." (Conversion of 3.5 times 5½ cents a pound average feed costs times 180 pounds of gain.) "On the other hand, the cost of feeding an all-wheat ration is about $31.68." (Conversion of 4 times 4.4 cents average feed costs times 180 pounds.)

"That's a savings of $2.97."

"Whichever way he goes -- all wheat or corn-wheat -- a producer with 1000 hogs can save about $3000," Bennett says.

If a farmer wishes to use wheat as some or all of a hog feed, he should check a few things first.

--Decide which route to go -- all wheat as the grain in the ration or about half wheat and corn, both at about 40 per cent of the total ration.

"Wheat finely ground becomes pasty in the hog's mouth and they don't like it as well as corn. For this reason, wheat should be coarsely ground. Hogs occasionally go off feed when fed the finely ground wheat rations.

"However, research data has shown good performance with either a corn-wheat mixture or an all-wheat ration," Rea says.

--Check with area Extension livestock or farm management specialists to find out specific percentages of grain and additives used in the rations computed by Rea and bennett.

"Also, we are available to formulate rations for both swine and beef cattle," says Bennett. The cost to formulate five swine rations or four beef rations is $10. For this service, contact Myron Bennett, 223-D Mumford Hall, UMC, Columbia, MO 65201.

Answers to pension questions

ST. LOUIS-- Millions of Americans not already covered by pension or profit-sharing plans where they work may be able to contribute tax-deductible dollars toward their retirement as a result of the Pension Reform Act of 1974. Here are some of the more commonly asked questions, with answers, about the provisions of the law.

Q: I'm a construction worker who's had a dozen different jobs in the last ten years. Is it true that now I can set up some kind of retirement plan for myself?

A: If you haven't been an active participant during your tax year in a pension or retirement program where you work, you can start an Individual Retirement Arrangement (IRA). That means you can set aside 15 percent of your pay, to a maximum of $1,500 a year, in an account which is specifically designed for your retirement years. You don't pay income tax on the money or on the interest it earns until you start withdrawing it, at age 59½ or later, or should you become disabled.

Q: I pay Social Security tax. Does that mean I can't start an IRA?

A: No. Social Security was never intended to be retirement pay, only to supplement whatever type of pension a retiree received. Neither Social Security nor Railroad Retirement coverage makes a person ineligible for an IRA.

Q: What are the advantages of an IRA?

A: (1) annual contributions to an IRA are deductible from gross income, even if a taxpayer does not itemize deductions;

(2) interest, dividends or capital gains earned on the IRA contributions are not taxable as they accumulate; and

(3) tax is due only after funds are withdrawn from an account. This normally happens after the individual is retired or disabled and is, therefore, in a lower tax bracket.

Q: Suppose I have a bad year financially. Is there any penalty for skipping a year's deposit?

A: No. Within the permissible limits, you can deposit as little or as much as you can afford. Also, timing of the deposits is not regulated, so you can make your payments periodically or in a lump sum.

Q: Other than the maximum contribution allowed, are there any restrictions on the account?

A: Yes. Withdrawals made before the owner is disabled or reaches age 59½ are considered taxable income and subject to an additional 10 percent penalty. Deposits which exceed the limit in any given year are subject to a non-deductible 6 percent excise tax each year. And finally, withdrawals must begin by the year the owner of the account reaches age 70½.

Q: I'm thinking of setting up an IRA for myself. Can I make it a joint account with my wife if she doesn't work for a living?

A: Yes, you can start an IRA for her as well as yourself. The details on this are the same as for an employee, except that the maximum annual contribution is the lesser of 15 percent of your income or $1,750.

Q: Do I come to the IRS to start an Individual Retirement Arrangement?

A: No. To set up your IRA you should contact a bank, savings and loan or federally-insured credit union. In addition, many brokerage firms and insurance companies can get you started. The IRS has prepared a free booklet, Publication 590, "Tax Information on Individual Retirement Savings Programs" which can be obtained from most local IRS offices and contains details on all types of individual retirement savings programs.

Consumers have lost ground since 1970

Associated Press Writer

Rising wages have helped offset many of the boosts in food costs over the last two decades, but consumers have lost ground since 1970.

Figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that it takes the average production worker less time today than it did in 1965 to earn the money needed to buy two dozen basic food items. It takes him or her longer than it did in 1970, however.

U.S. consumers remain better off than their European counterparts. Although exact comparisons are impossible because of different buying habits, tastes and statistics, a spot check indicates the food share of the family budget is considerably less in the United States than abroad.

To measure the cost of food for Americans in terms of time as well as money, the Associated Press checked average retail prices, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, for 24 items in 1965, 1970 and February 1977. Using average hourly wages, including overtime, the AP calculated how long it would take for the nonfarm, nonsupervisory production worker to earn the money needed to buy the items.

In 1965, the worker would have had to spend 275 minutes — just over 4½ hours — to purchase all 24 items. In 1970, he or she would have had to spend 231 minutes — just under four hours. Today, it takes 258 minutes — a little more than 4¼ hours.

The retail prices of the 24 items went up 89 per cent from 1965 to 1977; the amount of time needed to earn the money went down six per cent. From 1970 to 1977, the prices went up 64 per cent; the time went up only 12 per cent.

Looking at some specifics, the figures show that a pound of hamburger cost an average of 53 cents in 1965. The average production worker had to spend 13 minutes to earn that much money.

In 1970, the same hamburger cost 67 cents, but the worker needed only 12 minutes to earn the money. In 1977, the cost was 85 cents, the time was 10 minutes.

A one-pound loaf of white bread cost 21 cents and five minutes in 1965, 25 cents and four minutes in 1970 and 35 cents and four minutes in 1977.

The loss of ground in the 1970s is demonstrated by what has happened to the price of such items as canned tuna and eggs. It took the average worker eight minutes to earn the price of a 6½-ounce can of the fish in 1965 and seven minutes in 1970. By 1977, the time needed was back up to eight minutes.

The time needed to "buy" a dozen, large, Grade-A eggs went from 13 minutes in 1965 to 11 minutes in 1970 and back up to 12 minutes in 1977.

Of the 24 items used in the comparison, 16 "cost" less time in 1977 than they did in 1965. Only four items — round steak, chuck roast, hamburger and oranges — cost less in 1977 than they did at the start of the decade.

Even with the increases, the consumer is better off in the United States than elsewhere.

The Sunday Times of London reported late last year on the amount of time it took an average industrial worker to earn enough money to buy 10 items. Six of the foods coincided with items on the Bureau of Statistics list and in every case, the U.S. worker needed less time to earn the price of the product.

Other indications about the position of Americans in relation to consumers elsewhere are available in figures showing what proportion of income and spending goes for food. (Note: food takes a bigger percentage of spending than it does of income, because the spending figures don't take savings into account.)

Food — including items purchased away from home — has accounted for about 16 to 18 per cent of average income in the United States in recent years. According to the latest available figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, food accounted for about 20 per cent of spending in 1972-73, down from 24.4 per cent in 1960-61.

The latest available figures from Great Britain show that just under 25 per cent of the average weekly budget went for food in the first half of last year. In 1970, 26 per cent of the budget went for food.

A report by the Bank of Italy for 1975 — the latest year available — said 34.6 per cent of all consumer spending went for food, down from 37.1 per cent in 1970.

West German figures — compiled on an income rather than a spending basis — show that the average family spent about 25 per cent of its income for food in 1976, compared to 31 per cent in 1970.

Dear Sir:

Please find enclosed another typical government study on rats equated to humans, that follows their usual logic.

Another study funded by EPA during 1975 was published in the May issue journal of the Air Pollution Association covering ozone generation from large cities. Their results from airplane sampling showed from 20 per cent to 100 per cent increase in ozone in the ambient air after passing over large cities. Since the most spray cans are used in large cities, this is a net generation number. How can we ban spray cans when we have studies that show we could have a problem from too much ozone. It would certainly help if logic had precedence over emotion in this field. It would also save the taxpayers a few billion per year.

Yours truly,
Wm. Swann

PROTECT US FROM OUR PROTECTORS

On April 15, the Public Health Department of the State of New Jersey shocked the nation by declaring that television can cause brain damage in rats.

It based this claim on an exhaustive 10 day study during which six European brown rats had their cages placed directly in front of a TV receiver that operated 24 hours a day. By the end of the test period, three of the rats had become chronically aggressive, two had taken to walking on their hind legs, and the sixth just lay in a corner of the cage with his paws covering his eyes.

Scientists and health officials from other states have tried to discredit the New Jersey findings, but their attitudes are obviously motivated by professional jealousy. How else can you regard attacks such as "the sample size was too small," "European rats don't understand American television," or "it was a scientifically unbalanced sample; they should have had some black rats and some white rats as well."

These opposing views notwithstanding, the Federal Government is expected to take action any day now. Informed sources say that this will take the form of a complete ban on the sale of television sets, except for those people who have a doctor's prescription. Rumors persist, however, that the Government will instead make it illegal for anyone to watch television while sitting in a cage.

Regardless of the specifics, any Government action will have a decided effect not only on the television industry, but also on the hundreds of compoent manufacturers who serve it.

As if all this sin't enough, our sources tell us that the New Jersey Department of Health is considering using its rats to look into the safety aspects of microprocessors, LED displays, and flat-flexible cable.

PRUNING THE BUREAUCRACY

There is no doubt that President Carter's repeated campaign promises to reduce and reshape "the horrible, bloated bureaucracy" of government struck a responsive chord in a public weary of supporting such a burden.

Ture to his promises, the President has now obtained legislation enabling him to carry out what he himself concedes was his most consistent campaign theme. The reorganization bill gives him broad powers to reform the federal bureaucracy - a hodgepodge of some 1,900 agencies employing more than two million civilians.

It remains now to see how well and faithfully the new administration delivers on its promise. There is nothing easy about bringing under control a huge and entrenched bureaucracy.

Indeed, based on administration performance to date one must counsel a healthy skepticism. Campaigner Carter promised, for example, that President Carter would cut the White House staff by 30 per cent. Instead the White House staff has grown by 30 per cent since he took office.

In fairness, there are certain structural impediments that make it very difficult to end waste and promote efficiency in government. The bureaucrat whose fief is threatened knows wiles that would make Svengali himself writhe in envy.

Moreover, many offices that should be dismantled are protected by specific acts of Congress. For example, there are 1,175 advisory boards and committees that cling to the government like limpets, and Carter quite properly ordered them weeded out.

To his dismay, however, he discovered that of this number only 16 could be dissolved simply by presidential edict. The rest, established by Congress, will endure until and unless Congress goes through the tedious business of snuffing them out one by one.

We have doublts, as we say, but nothing would please us more than to see the White House deliver on the statement it uttered when the reorganization bill was signed: "The average citizen...can anticipate that the efficiency and quality of government service will be improved."

May the pruning shears remain sharp.

WHAT DID FROST KNOW--AND WHEN?

WASHINGTON— Something happened the other night when I was watching the fourth David Frost-Richard Nixon interview, which a friend of mine calls the "Rich Man, Poor Man and Now Richer Man" series.

I found myself more interested in watching David Frost than I did Nixon. There is something compelling about Frost's personality that Nixon lacks. Perhaps it's his forthright manner, or maybe it's his striped shirt, but every time he asked a question I sat up in my chair and when Nixon answered it I dozed off to sleep.

After watching Frost for four programs I started to ask myself, "When did Frost know about Watergate, and how much did he know?" We have been told that Frost taped 28 hours with Nixon. We have only seen six of them. What happened to the other tapes? Is there a coverup going on? Doesn't the public have the right to know everything that went on during those tedious sessions in San Clemente?

Were there any gaps in the TV tape because of poor lighting or planes flying overhead? Did Frost obstruct Nixon from answering a question about his crimes? And what about Frost's tax returns? Will he pay income taxes in the United States or will the money be shipped out of the country?

Can Frost be impeached by the Alpo Dog food company for forcing Nixon to admit the President is above the law? Can he be made to resign as a TV interviewer for failing to ask why Nixon didn't burn the tapes?

And will Frost receive a pardon from President Carter after putting us through the long nightmare of Watergate once again?

The only way these questions can be answered is by setting up a Special Prosecutor's Office to find out what Frost's real role was in all this. I would suggest some respected lawyer such as Archibald Cox to head the investigation.

I think all the TV tapes should be subpoenaed, and if any crime has been committed the evidence should be turned over to the grand jury.

I am not accusing David Frost of any wrongdoing. But the country has to know all the facts if we are ever to get to the bottom of the Nixon affair.

Six hours of television is not enough to tell us all the things we wanted to know, not only about Watergate but also Kissinger's relations with the former President. We know that Nixon and Kissinger prayed together in Lincoln's sitting room. What we don't know is what they were praying for. Was Nixon praying for Haldeman and Ehrlichman? Was Kissinger praying that Ford would keep him on? This was a crucial period in America's history. We have to assume that whatever Nixon prayed for, his prayers weren't answered. But we can't be sure of Kissinger. Did he make a secret deal with the powers that be which we still don't know about? Was Frost privy to what was said in those prayers?

And did Frost and Nixon pray together after they finished their interviews? And was this taped?

Until these questions are answered the American people will continue to agonize. The only solution is to have Frost testify under oath as to what his role was in covering up what Nixon had to say about his coverup.

We know that Nixon may try for a comeback after the TV series, but the question on everyone's mind is whether Frost can make a comeback? Will the public ever forgive him for bringing Nixon back into our homes?

Will David Frost have to live for the rest of his life with the image of the first man who interviewed Richard Nixon on television after the resignation? Or will he be remembered for the good things he did before he signed up Nixon? Only time will tell.

PERCENTAGE OF MOVERS DECLINES

The rate at which Americans move each year, although high, is showing a gradual decline, according to the Bureau of the Census.

During the year ending in March 1976, 17.1 per cent of the population one year old and older living in the United States (an estimated 35.6 million persons) moved. An additional 1.1 million moved from abroad; thus, 17.7 per cent of the 1976 resident U.S. population had moved.

The annual rate of moving was 20.1 per cent during 1958-61 and 19.1 per cent duriing 1968-71.

NON-ADVERTISERS ARE HIGHER

Investigations at the national level are indicating that at least one professional group gets higher prices for its services than it would if its private code of ethics allowed its members to advertise.

The contention of the investigators is that the consumer would pay less if the members of that group were allowed to advertise, thereby encouraging competition and lower prices to the consumer.

There are at least a half dozen or so profession in whcih their organizational "code of ethics", prohibits advertising. These groups are alleged to be the highest paid in the nation for the hours devoted to their work.

There is a national move to outlaw all such private group codes of ethics that prohibit advertising, on the theory that competitive advertising by them would lower living costs for the people (the consumers) whom they serve.

These facts should be something for the buyer to ponder, and tend to induce more trading with those who tell you what they have to offer, and what it is going to cost you, through honest and fair advertising.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS CRITICIZED

Many of the 65 world organizations to which the U.S. contributes more than $1 billion a year are "ineffective, top-heavy with high-paid officials and uncertain in their purposes," said a recent Senate report.

The report noted that although U.S. taxpayers contribute about one-quarter of the funding of these groups, they are universally under-represented and out-voted.

According to Chairman Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) of the Senate Government Operations Committee, who introduced the report in the Senate, "I do not think anyone in the organizations or the U.S. government can really tell us what all that money has achieved."

REFRESHING CANDOR

Now and then a refreshing bit of candor emerges from the Washington scene. One such instance of frankness shining among the general equivocation and ambiguity was the testimony of Rep. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, before the Quadrennial Commission on Executive, Judicial and Legislative Pay, concerning the proper level of pay for members of Congress.

Rep. Grassley acknowledged the difficulty of determining the productive capacity of an elected official "For instance," he said, "if one were to measure that amount of printed material generated each year by Congress and its individual members, on might determine that congressmen and senators were grossly underpaid. But if one were to judge their work on the basis of how effective Congress has been in dealing with the nation's major problems, it is clear that our elected representatives in Washington would merit a substantial cut in pay."

We couldn't agree more. — Jefferson City Post Tribune

REDWOODS SHOULD BE SAVED

From The Washington Post

We suppose that if you have been cutting down redwood trees or turning them into lumber all of your working life, the idea of not cutting them down is hard to accept — especially if not cutting them means a substantial decrease in the number of jobs available in your community. So we understand that the demonstrations in northern California against the proposed expansion of Redwood National Park are not just somebody's idea of a spring lark. They are serious efforts undertaken by people who have a personal stake in the continued cutting of the trees. the message that Representative Donald Clausen said was being sent — "that we are going to fight to keep our jobs" — came through loud and clear.

Unfortunately for Mr. Clausen and the people for whom he spoke, there are a good many others in the country prepared to fight to keep the trees. We count ourselves among them. There are few things on earth as magnificent as those giant redwoods, and the policy of the government ought to be to preserve as many, not as few, of them as it can. Redwood National Park should be expanded. And this should be done not merely to protect the watershed of the existing park, as some have suggested, but also to protect additional trees. The question is not one of saving just a few thousand acres of redwoods so that future generations can know what they look like, but rather of saving a part of our national heritage.

Of course, such thoughts are no comfort to people who face the loss of their jobs or a decrease in their business if the cutting of these trees is ended in another large section of northern California. Their complaints need to be taken seriously because their livelihoods will be seriously affected by an expansion of the park. In this situation, it may be appropriate for the Federal Government to aid them, just as it aids those who are dislocated by other federal projects.

EXOTIC DINING

Carol Sutton, managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, recently traveled to Mexico with her family. A dining experience of a lifetime, she writes, was the Pheasant and Deer Restaurant in Merida. It features small does wandering among the tables, a dog asleep on the bar, and an alligator in front of the ladies' room.

One of Carol's daughters hesitated to step over the alligator, so a lady at the next table whacked the creature in the tail. He slithered into a nearby pool. Once inside, the girl found another alligator wrapped around the commode. Considerably shaken, she returned to the table to find a doe polishing off her sandwich.

WOULD HELP LOWER WELFARE COSTS

There is a movement at Jefferson City to make it mandatory for officials to track down fathers who have left their families for any reason and compel them, where they are able, to support their deserted families, especially the children.

Too often, fathers disappear, little or no effort is made to locate them, and if the mother is unskilled, cannot get a job, or has to spend her time taking care of the youngsters, the cost of maintaining the family falls to the taxpayers through the welfare offices.

Those who want to hunt such men down and make them financially responsible for the family they voluntarily acquired are on the right track. If successful, and many fathers are found and action taken against them, it will help lower and eliminate unnecessary costs for those who are not responsible for that family.

Inside Labor

Guns and Butter:

National labor chief warns don't use 'Human Rights' as arms sales standard

WASHINGTON— It may be giving the self-purging Soviet Politburo some comfort to read in America's public prints that a new "left wing" coalition chomps impatiently on time in the wings, waiting for the old guard to fade away. There is an impression abroad that the American labor movement will shift directions when all it factions merge into a 20-million-member federation.

True, it will merge. And in the next five years. But though it will shift gears, it won't shift directions on basic policies when feisty George Meany pounds his last gavel.

It takes no Star Trek time machine to anticipate the headline-makers of the '80s. Among them certainly will be William W. Winpisinger, now chief of staff (and vice president) of the million-member International Association of Machinists (AFL-CIO). At 52, he talks loud and clear, as he waits to take over the mammoth union's presidency on July 1.

There isn't any doubt that Machinist chief Bill Winpisinger will cast the mold of many future AFL-CIO policies. Indeed, this machine-gun tongued militant may someday sit in the mightiest seat of the AFL-CIO. So what "Winpy" has to say on guns and butter, as my elders used to put it, and on human rights and the sale abroad of futuristic sound barrier-smashing jet fighters is of significance. Especially to President Carter.

Recently Winpisinger testified before a Senate subcommittee on foreign assistance. He discussed the arms export control act.

And he told the President of the U.S. -- as he has one or two other Presidents on other issues - forget it.

If the U.S. uses "human rights" as a standard for sales of jet fighters to other nations we will drive them right into the hands of the real enemy, Winpisinger warned. Winpy, who is a voracious militant when he battles on the collective bargaining front, said in effect -- don't use our standard of government as the basis of choice of allies and customers for our fantastic fighter aircraft.

Winpy, who isn't fazed by labor chief George Meany, told Jimmy Carter and the Congress not to impose "indiscriminate restrictions on sales of military aircraft.

"We cannot agree with those who demand that military sales be limited to nations that are Simon-pure in terms of human rights," said Winpisinger.

Does this make this left-winger a right-winger? Or does it develop my basic theory that labor chiefs survive by delivering to their constituencies -- in this case scores of thousands of aerospace members of the Machinists' union.

Winpy, as always, as other U.S. Presidents have learned, was telling it like it is.

"If we were to cut off aid to every country that is not a perfect democracy, and if we were to limit our trade solely to those countries possessing all the atrtirbutes of parliamentary democracy, including a free press and a bill of rights (sic), we would have to retreat into a shell of isolationism like that of the 1930s. It didn't work then. It won't work now.

"We do not believe Congress or the President can reform undemocratic regimes by placing them in economic quarantine. Such action is more likely to drive them into arms of even more repressive regimes."

So, Winpisinger urged, sell American war planes abroad to all but enemies of the U.S. because without such sales our aerospace industry will begin falling apart -- and with it our leadership of commercial planes in the friendly skies.

Winpisinger isn't unique in the so-called liberal left-of-center bloc inside labor. There's the United Auto Workers brand new president Doug Fraser, with whom the trend watchers say Winpisinger soon will coalesce inside the AFL-CIO to give that 91-year-old federation (which has had but three presidents, not including one who served for a year) a new leftward look.

Doug Fraser has a deep interest in the prosperity of the armament industry as well as "aerospace."

There is a matter of some $3 billion worth of new Army fighter tank production which will create thousands of jobs in Detroit and-or Lima, Ohio. That is, in ta GM facility or in Chrysler's. Or both.

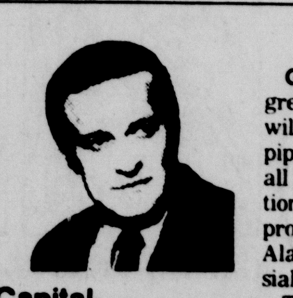
Does this turn Fraser into an armament-monger? Or a "right-winger"? Hardly. These leaders are realists. This isn't the time to "psyche" their motives -- or those of the AFL-CIO's Executive Council, which in February demanded the full spending of $21.6 billion over 10 years to complete the B-1 strategic bomber program.

Does this make them right-wingers? No. It does prove they're for a powerful defensive force, on which the U.S. can rest while the Soviets shift their own political apparatus and sift the sands of Africa below the Sahara.

My elders used to say you can't churn butter with guns. Right. But you can make lots of bread for lots of workers. If there's no war, you simply make new weapons. If there is conflict, it's nice to have the old ones around -- at home and among your allies abroad. You can always lecture those allies if they survive. If they don't it will have done little good moralizing them into a stupor.

That's the labor chief's message to Jimmy Carter, I do believe.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND



J. Edgar Still Haunts Capital

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The ghost of J. Edgar Hoover, whose bulldog visage became a national symbol of the fight against public enemies, still haunts Washington. He not only lasted on top of the bureaucracy longer than any other American, but he was also perhaps the most powerful and feared public official in the history of the republic.

Beginning with a colleciton of misfits, he transformed the FBI into the world's most formidable law enforcement agency. He set such high standards that his agents became folk heroes.

Yet Hoover was an incurable curmudgeon, conservative in his ways and narrow in his outlook, who fiercely believed the words "My country, right or wrong." In dissent, he saw sedition. The cry of black power, by his lights, smacked of rebellion. The argument of conscience against the Vietnam War, as he saw it, bordered on outright treason.

He used his enormous power as director of the FBI to uphold his viewpoints. He indoctrinated his agents until they, too, saw no wrong in committing "patriotic" crimes.

Now John J. Kearney, a crack, conscientious agent has been indicted for violating the law in the line of duty. He headed a covert-operations squad in New York City.

Agonizing pressure was brought upon Attorney General Griffin Bell to drop the charges against Kearney. The shock waves have shaken FBI morale down to the roots, Bell was warned. But he told subordinates that FBI agents must live by the law they have sworn to uphold. Agents who break the law, he declared, should be prosecuted.

He not only approved Kearney's indictment but may seek the indictment of Kearney's superior, J. Wallace LaPrade. Bell told associates that LaPrade has been "stonewalling." The attorney general indicated that he would convene another grand jury and give LaPrade the opportunity to clear the record. Otherwise, Bell indicated he would ask for LaPrade's indictment.

The late J. Edgar Hoover has given his name to the new FBI headquarters, a huge structure across the street from the Justice Department. It is an appropriate monument to his memory. Its bulk overwhelms the parent agency much as he overwhelmed the attorney general, who was supposed to be his superior.

But Griffin Bell does not intend to let the FBI again become the tail that wags Washington.

Gas Pains: It looks as if the great oil pipeline across Alaska will be surpassed by a gas pipeline across Canada, with all the cost overruns, production delays and environmental problems that have made the Alaskan pipeline so controversial.

The Federal Power Commission has recommended that a Canadian pipeline be built to carry natural gas from the north slopes of Alaska to the lower 48 states. This should greatly increase the amount of gas available to American consumers.

But buried in the files of the Environmental Protection Agency is a startling, confidential report that the $7 billion pipeline will cost the American taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars more than necessary.

Three large energy conglomerates -- Arctic Gas, Alcan and El Paso -- have produced rival plans for its construction. But the confidential feasibility study warns that it is "highly probable none of the three proposed systems would be able to meet its proposed schedule" and that all three proposals would "probably experience a certain amount of cost overruns."

The analysis goes on to warn that Arctic's Canadian pipeline may not work at all under any circumstances. The idea of building the pipeline under harsh winter conditions, with temperatures often dropping to 50 degrees below zero, "would prove basically impracticable and would require extensive revisions or project abandonment," the study declares.

President Carter must decide which, if any, of the three plans will be implemented. Whatever his decision, it probably will wind up costing the taxpayers billions.

Footnote: The feasibility study was prepared at a cost of $120,000 by Research Planning Associates. The three firms that want to construct the pipeline have submitted their critical comments. Then a final version will be presented to the president. It is expected to have "considerable influence" upon the president, a spokesman said.

Nuclear Nightmare: Nuclear power has been ballyhooed as a cheap form of energy, which could replace oil and solve the energy crisis. Yet there is dismaying evidence that nuclear power is actually running up utility bills and aggravating unemployment.

The story is told in a forthcoming book, "Nuclear Power: The Bargain We Can't Afford," by the Washington-based Environmental Action Foundation. We have obtained the raw galley proofs. Here are a few of the highlights.

— The book alleges that nuclear power plants have had average cost overruns of 100 per cent. In most instances, unsafe designs and equipment had to be corrected at a cost that was passed along to the utility customers.

— The nuclear industry has claimed its exhorbitant capital costs are offset by the low cost of radioactive uranium. But the truth, according to the book, is that uranium supplies are dwindling dangerously. Already, the price has shot up from $7 to $42 per pound. It could reach $250 a pound by 1985, the book warns.

— Because of soaring prices, Westinghouse Electric, the nation's largest builder of nuclear plants, abruptly canceled all of its uranium contracts. This leaves 27 utilities with no guarantee of future supplies.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 29, the 149th day of 1977. There are 216 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1453, the capital of the Byzantine Empire, Constantinople, was captured by the Turks. The date is listed by some historians as the end of the Middle Ages.

On this date:

In 1736, the American patriot, Patrick Henry, was born in Hanover County, Va.

In 1790, Rhode Island ratified the U.S. Constitution, completing approval by all of the 13 original colonies.

In 1848, Wisconsin joined the Union as the 30th state.

In 1917, the 35th American president, John F. Kennedy, was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1943, the Americans defeated the Japanese in the Pacific War Battle of Attu in the Aleutians.

Five years ago: In Moscow, President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev signed a declaration pledging the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. to an era of peaceful coexistence with a goal of total disarmament.

One year ago: Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago gave city workers who lived outside Chicago until August 1 to move into the city or be dismissed.

Thought for today: Men must be governed by God or they will be ruled by tyrants. — William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, 1644-1718.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 30, the 150th day of 1977. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1883, a report that the new Brooklyn Bridge in New York was about to collapse created panic. Six persons on the bridge were trampled to death.

In 1942, during World War II, more than 1,100 British bombers pounded Cologne, Germany.

In 1961, the dictator of the Dominican Republic, Rafael Trujillo, was assassinated.

In 1963, an estimated 10,000 people were killed in a windstorm that struck East Pakistan.

Five years ago: President Richard M. Nixon made a brief stopover in Iran after a conference with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Today's birthday: Band leader Benny Goodman is 68.

Thought for today: What we see depends mainly on what we look for. — John Lubbock, English astronomer and mathematician, 1803-1865.

House investigation leader doubts criminal activity in MU timber sale

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, who headed a special investigation into the sale of timber at Weldon Spring, said Thursday that he didn't believe there was any evidence of criminal activity.

"Just the probability of incompetency at a very costly level to the state," Vossmeyer said after the hearing on the timber sale in which a logger paid the University of Missouri approximately $44,000 and grossed almost $189,000.

Russell Porter, the logger, said he believed he made a "good profit" on the venture and that it was unlikely that he would ever be able to do it again.

Homer L'Hote, the university official who approved the transaction, told the House Governmental Review Committee his blessings on the sales were a "mistake in judgement."

The committee subpoenaed Porter and L'Hote in an effort to determine why the university did not receive a higher price for the timber cut by Porter at the forest in St. Charles County in 1976 and 1977.

Porter, a University of Missouri graduate, told the committee that he did not reveal the exact amount of money he had received for the logs he cut from Weldon Spring at an earlier hearing because he didn't want the public to know how much money he made in the venture.

"The public didn't have to know how much I received," Porter said. "I feel justified in what I paid and I feel justified in what I received."

Porter, who cut almost 800 walnut and white oak trees which were later sold to buyers in West Germany and Japan, said he was taught in school "to buy my inputs as low as possible and to sell my outputs as high as possible."

Porter siad he thought he made a good profit. "Better than I ever expected," he said.

L'Hote, assistant director of the university's agricultural experiment station, said he did not check with anyone on the fairness of the price offered by Porter for the trees. Porter had first contacted L'Hote about cutting trees at the Weldon Spring area in 1973 while he was still a student on the Columbia campus.

Porter later was asked by L'Hote if he wanted to harvest more timber from the 8,000-acre tract of land and he submitted the prices he was willing to pay for the trees.

L'Hote testified that he asked Porter if the bids he gave represented a fair market price for the timber. Porter told him they did and L'Hote never questioned Porter's prices again.

"I felt like any of our students are reputable people," L'Hote said. L'Hote said he did not know what Porter had been receiving for the trees he had cut. "I thought he would give a fair price," he said.

Porter defended not telling the committee at an earlier hearing on the timber sale how much money he had received for the trees. Although a report by State Auditor Thomas Keyes indicated Porter received almost $189,000 for the trees, he told the committee he had only received $86,000.

"I didn't feel like I was lying," Porter said. He underplayed the amount he received for the timber, he said, to save himself from embarrassment in the community.

The House earlier this week approved a bill requiring the university to obtain legislative approval for all large land sales. The Senate has already approved the measure but they must okay an amendment tacked on to the bill by the House.

That proposal would require the university to obtain bids on any mineral, timber or natural resources valued at more than $500.

'Presents Double Feature'

"Richie Brockeman, the Missing 24 Hours"

A neophyte gumshoe quickly becomes a seasoned veteran when he is hired by an amnesia victim who can't explain why she's the target of two gunmen, in "Richie Brockelman, the Missing 24 Hours," the first half of a double feature presentation on BC-TV Sunday, May 29 (7-8:30 p.m.).

The film will be followed by "Benny and Barney, Las Vegas Undercover" (8:30-10 p.m. DST).

Dennis Dugan stars as the private eye and Suzanne Pleshette makes a special guest appearance as the amnesia victim.

Out of desperation, Elizabeth Morton reluctantly hires young Rickie Brockelman to drive her to San Diego for a $250 fee. Brockelman, believing the job is quite simple, agrees, but when he returns her to her motel, two men shoot at them. After their lucky getaway, an angry Richie insists on an explanation and Elizabeth makes a bizarre confession.

"Benny & Barney" Las Vegas Undercover

The Las Vegas Strip provides the backdrop for "Benny and Barney, Las Vegas Undercover," the second half of a double feature presentation on NBC-TV Sunday, May 29 (8:30-10: p.m. DST).

Ex-showgirl Margie Parks witnesses the slaying of Las Vegas entertainer Will Dawson. Fearing adverse publicity which would affect her child-custody fight, she turns to Barney Tuscom and Benny Kowalski, two suspended cops working as The Aristocrats, a singing duo. When they arrive on the scene, Benny and Barney are surprised to learn from Police Lt. Callan that Dawson was not slain, but is a kidnap victim.

CBS

Glenn Ford and Lance Kerwin portray father and son in "The Family Holvak," highly praised dramatic series about a rural preacher and his family in the South during the Depression years, to be presented in rebroadcasts, beginning Tuesday, May 31 (7:00-8:00 PM, DST) on the CBS Television Network.

The Drug Scene

Part IV

THE DRUG SCENE

By Robert Vaughan

This is the final article in a series of investigative reports dealing with both the drug scene, and the sex businesses in Sikeston. Commercial sex is one of the most lucrative of all unsavory businesses, and therefore tends to mushroom once it establishes roots in a community. Those roots have been established in Sikeston, and it is going to be very difficult to eradicate them. Difficult, but not impossible. The federal and state governments have placed that right and responsibility in the hands of local communities. But local ordanances must be effective, if they are to do the job. And effective laws cannot be drawn up if the specifics aren't addressed. Specifics cannot be addressed if the facts are not known, and that is what this series of articles has attempted to provide. It is an offensive business, so describing it can sometimes be offensive itself. I have made an effort to couch my descriptions in such a way as to provide the maximum information, with the minimum offense. It is a difficult line to walk, and so I ask your indulgence for those areas in which I may have been too vague, and I beg your pardon for those places where I may have been too explicit. But please remember that knowledge is the armor of truth, and truth is the sword of justice.

The Director of Public Safety, Ken Francis, was most cooperative, and eager to speak with me for the final series

For the last three weeks, I have been devoting the stories in this magazine to the drug scene in Sikeston. I have also written two editorials concerning the massage parlors and pornographic material for sale in town.

For this final article, I have decided to bring them together into one, all-encompassing article. After all, there is some basis of relationship between the two, they are but one layer apart in the structure of society. The sex oriented business crosses and re-crosses the sometimes indistinct line of legality, the drug business is generally illegal.

It is interesting however, that even in the drug business, there is that shadow area where the law cannot reach. I touched on this briefly in the very first article of this series with features from the magazine High Times.

Many of the articles in that magazine repeated the line, "Check at your local head-shop", when they were talking about the drug equipment for sale. "The rush hits you like a skydiver, when you use this smoking bong," one ad ran.

Now, for those users in Sikeston who want the rush to hit them like a skydiver, there are smoking bongs available. Not only bongs, but roach clips (devices for holding a marijuana cigarette when it gets down to the very end) and other drug-related items. Sikeston has its very own headshop, located on Greer Street, right behind Long John Silver's.

I think it is very important here that you are familiar with the term, 'head shop', which means a place where 'dope-heads' can buy their equipment. Don't get it confused with Head Shed, which is a legitimate hair styling salon in town.

It is not against the law to sell the equipment necessary to smoke hashish, though it is against the law to sell hashish itself. But the very fact that there is a business establishment which is doing business in these things, shows that someone is buying them....and someone is using them. They can't all be for decoration.

I spoke with the Sikeston Public Safety Director to get the police story with regard to the drug scene in Sikeston.

"Do we have a problem? Well, to a certain degree,"Francis said. "It depends of course on the definition of the term problem."

"I can appreciate that the definition of the term is dependent upon the amount of cases we are dealing with," I said. "So, how many cases are we dealing with?"

"Bear in mind that the number of cases we see won't necessarily be indicative of the number of cases there actually are. But it can at least give us something to go on. This list covers everything which is drug-related and in which we have become involved, since the first of this year."

I looked at the sheet of paper Francis handed me, and extracted this information:

"This tends to support a theory I have developed over the last few weeks," I said. "I believe there is an active drug culture in Sikeston, but that the age is just beyond high school age. There are, to be sure, high school kids using it, but the actual culture is just beyond high school age."

"That would tend to be the indication from our side of it," Francis said.

"Do you have a division which deals with drugs?" I asked.

"No, not as such," Francis said. "When we get wind of a case, or when investigation is necessary, then we turn it over to our CID people and they handle it from there."

"You said when you get wind. How do you get wind? Do you have undercover agents working?"

"Well, no, not as such. We have done undercover work in the process of investigating activity. I, of course, can't go into that too much. Sometimes when we make an arrest for one thing, we are led into something else. This is especially true of the drug scene. Sometimes someone who is arrested will tell on others in his group, in order to ensure a better position for himself."

"Do you use informers regularly?"

"We do use them, but we have to be very careful. You don't want to burn your sources, so you have to play that end of it very carefully.

"What about some of the places where rumor says that the users can score? Are you aware of what the places are?"

"Yes, and we keep our eyes open. Information gets back to us as to who is doing what, and where they are doing it."

"What about the massage parlors, and the porno-book store?" I asked.

"I've been hearing quite a bit about that lately," Francis said. "We keep an eye open there too. From what I've been able to determine, the massage parlors are very strict on their girls. They allow no sex whatever."

"They allow no copulation. They do provide locals. Do you know what those are?"

"Yes," he said. "But as of now, they are doing nothing that breaks the law. You know when this new one, this Scorpio, came into town, they hired a lawyer. I don't mean they hired one just to help them set up with papers and so forth. they hired a lawyer to help keep them out of trouble. Now you have to admit that there is something suspect about a company which moves into town and starts a business, then hires a lawyer to keep them out of trouble as their very first act."

"What about the girls who work there?" I asked.

"They seem to have a very high turn-over," Francis answered.

I left the police station wondering just what the massage parlors looked for in the girls they hired, so I located a girl who had just applied for a job, then decided not to take it.

"Who did you talk with?" I asked.

"Two young girls," she answered.

"How young?"

"They could have been 21, but I doubt it."

"Did they have the authority to hire you?"

"They had the authority to recommend me. But I would have to see the big boss later, before I was officially hired."

"What went on? I mean from the moment you went in and applied for a job?"

"Well, when I went in, there were these two girls there. They looked at me very strangely, and then one of them asked me if she could help. I told her I was looking for a job."

"You are looking for a job, lady?" one of them asked.

"I said yes, I just got divorced and I need the money. I think they were surprised because I was a little older than average. In fact, they asked me how old I was, and when I said I was thirty, I could tell they were surprised I had come in."

"Have you ever worked in a massage parlor before?" one of the girls asked.

"No, but I'm willing to give it a try," I answered.

"The girl gave me a form to fill out, and when I was finished, asked me one more time if I was serious. I replied that I was, so she said, "Do you have any hangups about taking off your clothes?"

"When I answered no, the girl asked me to step into one of the rooms and strip. I did that, and a few minutes later she came into the room and made me turn around slowly so she could look at my body. Then she asked me to sit on the massage table and she walked around, examining me again."

"What was she looking for?"

"Scars. She said that their customers don't like girls with bad scars on their bodies."

"Did she tell you what would be expected of you?"

"Yes. I told her I had never done this before, and I wanted to know just what was expected of me. She told me that the man would be nude, and I would be nude. I would give him a rubdown, and then I would give him a local. She asked me if I knew what a local was, and I said yes. She said that a local was a regular part of the massage, and she hoped I didn't have any aversions to doing that."

"Then what?"

"She told me that after I gave the man a massage then he was to be allowed to give me one. But where the man was concerned, it was to be strictly a massage, and nothing more. I was told that I would have to sign an agreement to that effect and it would notarized.

"What else did the girl say?"

"After the massage was over, the man could take a shower if he wanted to, but I couldn't get into the shower with him. I could lean in, but not put my entire body in."

"What about the pay?"

"The pay is very good. $135 for three days work, and she said you never make less than $75 pr week in tips. She said that if you satisfy the customer, that when he comes back the tip will be two or three times as high as it was the first time."

"Did she say anything else?"

"Yes. She said that when she first started working there she felt like a slut everytime she touched a man, that it was really degrading. But finally she got to thinking that if a man wanted to pay her to do this then he was just as bad as she was. In fact, she said that she considers everyone who comes there now as a pervert. She said she had to really psyche herself up to to come out and start work, and it generally took a couple of hours to get ready. She generally did this by reading trashy magazines."

"What did you tell her?"

"I told her that I would have to let her know. That I was going to have a hard time dealing with it."

"And did you call back?"

This is the conclusion of the investigative series on the drug scene, and the inner-related sex business of Sikeston. It is the end of the series, but hopefully, not the end of concern. There is much cause for concern here. There are many locations in Sikeston where the young people tend to congregate and traffic in drugs. When the police makes one of them too hot, the users simply move to another location. And now, there is operating publicly, a headshop, or store dealing in drug paraphernalia.

In addition to the drug points, there are the sex connections. In addition to the slick, near-porno magazines which are displayed openly in several magazine racks around town, there is now the brazen operation of the explicit porno-book store right down town. There are two massage parlors, where for a fee, a nude male can be massaged with all its implications, by a nude female, or females.

But concerned citizens have already begun an effort to turn this cancerous growth back A petition was presented to the City Council this week, asking the City Council to look into the situation, and the City Council has promised to examine the issue. It is the first step in building the dike to stem the tide of inner-city decay, both in drugs and sex businesses It is a vestige ot treedom which says that we, as a city, can establish our own patterns of public decency. It is our manifest right, and solemn obligation to do so.

A Sikeston Alternative

By Robert Vaughan

I'm impressed with John Braddock. I'm impessed, because I met him in a skeptical frame of mind, primarily discharging an obligation to a friend more than anything else, and yet came away convinced that John Braddock is for real.

Why was I a skeptic? Because John Braddock was an ex-addict and an ex-con who was trying to start some sort of counselling program in Sikeston. As I understood it, it was some sort of charismatic movement, stemming from the fact that John Braddock had lived a life of sin, but had been 'saved' in a religious experience. Since that time, he has dedicated his life to saving others.

"I tend to be skeptical of this sort of thing," I said. "Not because I am not cognizant of the power of God, but because in my way of thinking, charismatic people tend to detract from the real issue. People like Amy Simple McPherson, for example, don't rate very high in my book."

"I don't think we should be judgemental in our appraisal of her. I think some of the information about her may have been distorted. Like Katherine Kuhlman for example. I think she did some wonderful things, but now there is a book out which tends to lay some bad things on her."

"I don't mean to be judgemental in that sense," I said. "But what bothers me is the commercialization of this type thing. The spangled clothes, the hoopla, the uproar."

"Right," John said. "I see where you are coming from now. I misunderstood you. I thought you were saying you didn't believe in the concept of God healing. But you are talking about people who take God's light onto themselves."

"Yes. I interviewed Dr. Reed last year, and he is a medical Doctor who also believes in faith healing. But his is a very low key approach, and that kind of approach I can appreciate. But what about you? What was the basis of your transformation?"

"Something....down inside....just rebelled. I had had enough. I was sick of my life."

"Well, I went through it all," John said. I started using marijuana at the age of 14. And I took pills, finally I got onto the hard stuff."

"Let me ask you something," I interrupted. "You were in that life, you were smoking pot and dropping pills. You knew what the life was like, you knew what you were getting into by messing aound with heroin, yet you did it. Why?"

"The only thing I can say is that I was finally drawn into it. You know, many people say that if you smoke pot long enough it will lose its kick and you'll have to go to the next step. That's not true. Pot doesn't lose its kick, you could smoke it for one hundred years. But, you have to realize that I was deeply involved in this culture with all my friends. We were all into drugs and most of the others, people I had grown up with, were using heroin. They kept trying to get me to do it but I refused for almost two years. Then one day I went to my connection's house to score and he didn't have any marijuana. He suggested I try a little heroin. I looked around and saw some of my friends on the nod...meaning that they were high on heroin, so I took a shot. I mainlined the first time. After that, I was so involved in it anyway, that I just slid right on into it."

"The prison record came next?"

"Yes. I was in and out of jails, prisons, Rehabilitation Centers, hospitals, everything. I had the best psychiatric help, but nothing pulled me off. I remember writing my mother just before getting out of one the institutions, telling her that I was cured. But as soon as I got out, I got high again, and I remember that when I got off the bus I was so high I didn't even recognize my mother. She cried all the way home."

"When did the transformation come?"

"I went right back into the drug scene and it wasn't anytime [illegible] until I was arrested again. Then one day shortly thereafter, I was in jail and something.....down inside...just rebelled. I had just had enough. I was sick of my life, and sick of what I was doing to myself and everyone else. My mother had told me many times to give Jesus a chance. She was a good Christian, but I never gave much thought to what she said. But, for some reason that day I said I'd give it a try. After she left I asked the jailer...and I'd been there so often I knew all of them by name....if he'd bring me a bible. He did, and I read it while everyone else went for their hour dayroom and recreation break. I was alone, and to be honest I couldn't understand most of what I read. But something...I know now it was the Holy Spirit...moved me, and I got down on my knees and prayed. I said, 'Jesus, if you want my life, it's yours to do with as you please'. Well, before long I just changed. I could tell that I had. And I told my mother I had changed. She offered to go my bail if I would go to Teen Challenge and work there, and I agreed. And, it had been a long time since she had gone my bail for me, because before I always skipped out. This time though, I went to Teen Challenge, and I worked, and I witnessed for the Lord. Then other things began to happen. By a technicality, my charge was changed, so that instead of facing a 5 to twenty year sentence, I faced a 2 to twenty. That also meant that the judge could grant me probation if he wanted to. By the time I went down for sentencing, I was ready to accept God's will, whatever it was. The judge looked at my jacket for a long time, then looked at me. 'I don't normally do this,' he said, 'but something tells me you are going to make it this time'. He gave me three years probation and I had to pinch myself when I walked out of there. From there, I went on to Bethany Bible College. I got married to a wonderful woman who has helped me all the way, and now I am a minister fulfilling a genuine call to serve Jesus."

"And that is what you are doing here?"

"Yes. The Sikeston Christian Center will be to provide counselling for anyone who needs it. Counselling of a spiritual nature. God helped me, and I know He can help others in the same way."

"How is your program going?"

"We have a board of advisors, made up of clergy and lay people. And, we have a building already, the old Accent Shop. We are entirely funded by donations, and though we have received many generous gifts, we need much more. We need outright donations, and pledges from anyone who will help us in this work."

"When will you open?"

"I hope we are open by the end of next month. At least we are aiming for that."

"I hope you are too, John. I think what you are doing is worthwhile, and considering the new businesses which have been the subject of my stories for the last few weeks, this is a breath of fresh air."

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

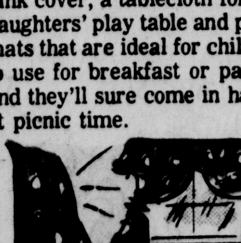
DEAR HELOISE:

I went to a final, final bargain sale today and among the goodies I picked up was a beautiful print shower curtain.

The only problem I had was in finding window curtains to match so, on an impulse, I bought another shower curtain exactly the same.

I didn't realize what a gold mine I had until I got home and started working with it. I was able to cut two pairs of curtains from that one shower curtain.

I also made a doily for my tank cover, a tablecloth for my daughters' play table and place mats that are ideal for children to use for breakfast or parties and they'll sure come in handy at picnic time.



Of course, by being plastic, the place mats, table cloth, etc. can be machine washed every so often to keep them fresh.

I feel good about the great bargain I got.

By the way, my old shower curtain makes a perfect cover for the sandbox, bicycles or baby's stroller.

STATIC BREAKER

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you know that there are two things you can do to help control static electricity in a busy office with lots of metal files and desks?

First, to keep polyester pants from clinging to your legs, apply a generous coating of hand lotion to your legs, both under and over your stockings.

Second, to keep from getting shocked when approaching something metal that you must open, touch the metal surface with a coin first, then open with your hand.

Saves many a tingle.

Long-Time Reader

IN THE PIGGY BANK

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 14 years old. I read your column every Sunday and I really enjoy it.

My family is always breaking glasses. Well, I've thought of a grand idea of counting what we break.

Get an old jar or piggy bank, and for every glass you break put a quarter or 15 cents in the piggy bank.

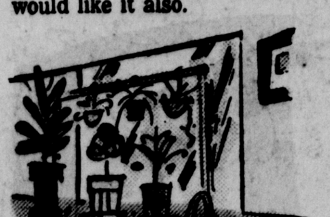
You will be surprised at how fast the money builds up, and you can take that money and buy a new set of glasses.

Tracy C.

PLANTS HANGER

DEAR HELOISE:

I liked this idea so much that perhaps some of your readers would like it also.



My daughter has two large glass sliding doors in the den. She has pots of plants in front of the one door that she doesn't open and it looks lovely. But I got a surprise when I visited one day and saw a garment rack in front of the door.

The large plants sit under the garment rack and an array of hanging plants hang where the clothes are to be hung.

It looks beautiful.

BUREAU OF WORKS

DEAR HELOISE:

Pull drawers out too far and wham! — You spill everything.

IT'S A SNAP

DEAR HELOISE:

My problem — hundreds of snapshots.

Solution — a plastic recipe box.

Use the filing cards for the years and file each snapshot back of the year it was taken.

VACUUM SAVER

DEAR HELOISE:

When my vacuum cleaner bag gets full I carefully make a slit or cut across the fold and empty the contents of the bag in the garbage.

I wipe the dust off the inside of the bag and glue the bag where it was cut.

I then take a piece a paper-type masking tape and put it over the cut and this double seals the bag.

Some bags are quite expensive and this way you can use the bag two or three times.

Esther Deleake

DEAR HELOISE:

I've been reading your most helpful hints for years and now I have one for you!

Those tall potato chip cans are perfect for holding one pound of spaghetti after you open the box.

Just slip the spaghetti in these cans and it will keep, and also will be bug-free.

Aunt Minnie

NEEDLEPOINT TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother took up needlepoint and she does about six or seven canvasses a year. She mostly designs her own, so obviously she has extra yarn.

To preserve it without knotting, she takes the plastic hoops from a six-pack of soft drinks, loosely ties a group of yarn (same color) around each hoop and then sticks it in her needlepoint bag, which is made of cloth.

The plastic hoops are twice as useful for the price of one, and the cloth bag is used to carry the yarn and canvas in.

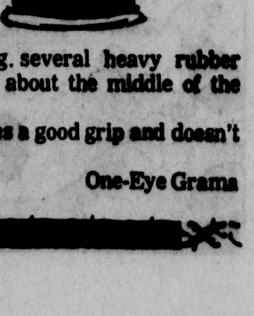
HOLD TIGHT!

DEAR HELOISE:

We haven't had a broken vacuum bottle since I started putting. several heavy rubber bands about the middle of the bottle.



Gives a good grip and doesn't slip.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with help from the new tax cut, many Americans face a substantial loss of purchasing power this year because of inflation.

With the year nearly half over, government figures indicate that inflation will be significantly worse this year than in 1976 when consumer prices advanced 4.8 per cent.

Inflation pushed consumer prices up 3.2 per cent in the first four months of the year, and the Carter administration recently raised its inflation forecast for all of 1977 from 5.3 per cent to 6.7 per cent.

But the recent pace of inflation is causing speculation that it could be worse than that before the year is over.

Administration economists expect a slowdown in the inflation rate after midyear, especially in food prices, which have risen 5 per cent in the first four months.

Nonetheless, there are signs of concern.

President Carter told a news conference Thursday that his "main concern at this point on the economic scene is the rate of inflation ..."

And the pace of inflation clearly is behind moves by the money-managing Federal Reserve Board to tighten growth of the money supply to make loans more expensive.

On Friday, several major banks raised their prime lending rate for loans from 6½ to 6¾ per cent, the second increase in a week. Since higher interest rates can discourage economic growth, the stock market responded by pushing the Dow Jones industrial average for stocks below 900, to 898, for the first time since Jan. 7, 1976.

Although Carter has previously said inflation and unemployment could be battled simultaneously, his latest statement appeared to move him a big step closer to the position of former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon that inflation was "public enemy No. 1."

There are a lot of reasons why Carter and his advisers worry about the recent high rate of inflation.

For one thing, rising prices mean consumers may have to cut back on expenditures. There were signs that this may have started in April, when retail sales failed to increase for the first time in months.

The combination of reduced consumer buying plus higher interest rates could endanger administration goals for economic growth and employment.

The real purchasing power of workers' paychecks declined in April for the fourth time in five months and was one-tenth of 1 per cent below what it was a year earlier. That was after adding in increased pay.

While the tax cuts signed into law by Carter last week will reduce taxes by about $100 a year for the average family of four, the losses to inflation should more than offset that.

Even if inflation holds to the 6.7 per cent forecast by the administration, it still means a person with $10,000 income would lose $670 in purchasing power because of higher prices by year end. That person already had lost $320 in purchasing power by the end of April.

Until April, at least, consumers had been increasing their purchases, in part, by drawing on savings. Americans were saving only 4.8 per cent of their income in the first quarter of this year, one of the lowest rates in years. The savings rate was 7.8 per cent in 1975 and 6.5 per cent last year.

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, is pessimistic about the pace of consumer spending in months ahead, partly because the savings rate is so low and because it is likely consumers will want to build their savings up again.

One reason consumers reduced their savings, she said, may have been that they anticipated receiving the $50-per-person tax rebate that Carter had proposed but then withdrew earlier this year.

A rising inflation rate also could underonistration efforts to win restraint in wage increases this year. So far, wage hikes have been averaging about 8 per cent a year, a rate that may not continue to satisfy workers if it appears inflation will outpace those gains.

Rising wage rates usually result in even higher price increases, resulting in a wage-price spiral that the administration wants to avoid.

Carter has announced an anti-inflation program that rests heavily on his ability to work with both labor and management to moderate wage and price increases.

So far, they have only agreed to talk about what causes inflation.

Economic talks to enter final round

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final round of formal talks between the world's economic haves and have-nots opens Monday in Paris with the industrialized rich offering the underdeveloped poor some aid but mostly promises.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is going to Paris to take over the American delegation at the final session of the 27-nation Conference on International Economic Cooperation (CIEC).

Vance will present proposals worked out with other rich nations aimed at ending the 18-month conference, commonly called the North+South Dialogue, on a positive and conciliatory note.

U.S. officials say that to accomplish this, the poor nountries will be offered special economic aid and some spepledges to continue the effort to close the economic gap.

In exchange, the underdeveloped nations are expected to drop what the United States sees as unacceptable demands and to avoid emotional public criticism of the rich nations.

No one in the industrialized world claims these proposals will end the frustrations and bitterness of the poor countries or seriously close the economic gap between the two spheres.

But the poor countries are expected to accept the approach by the rich because the dialogue will continue and promises are better than nothing.

There are six major areas under discussion at Paris: commodities, resource and development aid, international debts, energy, capital investment and trade.

Under a general program worked out at an economic summit meeting in London earlier this month, the industrialized nations will approach these six areas in the following way:

—Commodities. Stabilize a few commodity prices, including copper, coffee, rubber, sugar and tin. This involves creating buffer or surplus stocks to keep the market supply steady when production falls short.

·A so-called "common fund" also would be used to finance this plan and to spread out price fluctuations by using money made from one commodity to support prices of others.

This approach falls far short of the original demands by the underdeveloped countries, which had called for a common fund and buffer stocks covering 18 com-

Fake food stamps discovered by secretary in local market

A secretary at Bruce's Big Star supermarket here, noticed something odd about some $1, $5 and $10 food stamps she was counting Monday afternoon.

"They looked almost like regular food stamps," Barbara Norton said, " except they were faded, instead of being a good green color. The design wasn't detailed either. It was very blurred. And the paper was a lot thicker than usual."

She called Sikeston police, who told her to call the welfare office. That office checked with the regional welfare office and told her to send the $70 in counterfeit food stamps to the St. Louis office of the Secret Service.

According to Miss Norton, there was "no way of telling who" passed the fakes. "We have maybe 300 customers through each of our seven cash registers every day."

A spokesman for the St. Louis Secret Service office said Friday, "it hasn't just cropped up down there. The same ones showed up about three months ago in St. Louis— about $100 worth, I guess — and then the activity around here ceased.

"I'm assuming the banks were the ones who caught the stamps because they all had the same serial numbers. We just put out an alert with the serial numbers."

Lester McQuaid, who handles food stamps for the Federal Reserve in St. Louis, said the counterfeit food stamps that showed up three months ago were "the first case we've had that I can remember. There's nothing we can do about counterfeits except hand them over to the Secret Service.

"The fact that they were all the same serial number doesn't necessarily mean that they were counterfeit," McQuaid added.

Sikeston Public Safety Detective E. D. Speakman said the investigation had shown few results so far, but "we're working on it. We've had some counterfeit bills passed before, but no food stamps."

The Secret Service spokesman said the maximum sentence for each instance of passing a counterfeit food stamp, a federal offense, is five years in prison.

NEW MADRID— A 21-year-old Catron man, Rodger Dale Ervin, drowned at 11:30 p.m. Friday after walking into the water at a washout located one and a half miles off route D, between New Madrid and Lilbourn.

New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton said Ervin had been sitting on the bank during a party with a group of other youths when he said he felt like going into the water. Clayton said Ervin was dressed in slacks with no shirt on when he got up and headed for the water, according to statements given by witnesses who said that was the last time he was seen.

Clayton said it was also reported that Ervin could not swim.

Sheriff Walter Ivy, Ronnie Patterson and Gary Kimball of the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department recovered Ervin's body in about 12 feet of water 25 feet from

Sharpshooters stop gunman

He walked backward down the center lane of Interstate 94, saying "I'm going to kill 'em," Detroit Police Sgt. James Ayers said.

"At that point," Ayers said, "the green light was given." A Detroit police department marksman fired one shot, killing Taylor.

The six hostages were not hurt.

Rebels still resist in Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Angola's Marxist government said Saturday some rebels were still resisting after a bloody uprising that took the lives of at least six government leaders.

President Agostinho Neto, in a speech monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., named five members of the governing Council of Revolution and the director of security services as being killed in the revolt by extreme leftists. He said some of the bodies had been burned.

In Lisbon, the Portuguese news agency ANOP reported the burned bodies of the six officials had been found in a suburb of Luanda, the Angolan capital.

Among those named by both Neto and the ANOP report as dead were Finance Minister Saydi Mingas and army commander Eurico Goncalves.

Magnets may clean up coal

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists say they have found that magnets can pluck impurities out of dirty coal so it will burn almost pollution-free.

If the new method proves to be cheap enough, they say it could help provide vast new quantities of coal that will be clean enough to run power plants.

The technique, developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, removes most of the sulfur and 40 per cent of the ash-forming, noncombustible material from coal.

France to build power plant

PARIS (AP) — France will build a nuclear power plant of the plutonium breeding type recently banned in America by President Carter, it was declared formally Saturday.

Plans call for the plant to be able to produce 50 to 80 times more electricity from the same fuel charge than comparable nuclear plants in France and or abroad. It is rated for 1,200 megawatts and has an estimated cost of $900 million — not including its fuel load of 35 tons of a mixture of uranium and plutonium oxides.

Carter barred such breeder reactors in the United States as a unilateral step against the proliferation of plutonium which can be used in nuclear weapons.

99 dead in holiday traffic

CHICAGO (AP) — With the Memorial Day weekend well under way, traffic accidents were taking their toll as vacationers took to the highway for the first long summer holday.

By 10 p.m. EDT Saturday, 99 persons had died in traffic crashes.

The National Safety Council has estimated that 400 to 500 persons will lose their lives on the nation's roads over the three-day weekend.

The traffic fatality count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday.

Over the three-day Memorial Day weekend last year, 442 persons were killed in traffic accidents.

The highest toll for a Memorial Day was 629 deaths in the 1968 four-day observance.

Californians face blackouts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nine million Californians are facing the prospect of mandatory blackouts of electrical power this summer because of a lack of water for hydroelectric plants.

"It could be grim," said Don J. Baxter of the giant Pacific Gas & Electric Co., which is mapping plans for possible blackouts in the 47 counties it serves in northern and central California.

"We might well get through the summer without any trouble, but we know for sure that it's going to be close," Baxter added.

The crisis is the worst since 1948, when a war-caused shortage of power plant equipment triggered widespread mandatory conservation, but no blackouts. The mandatory blackouts would be the first in California's history.

They will become a reality only if emergency conservation — such as shutting down all home air conditioners — fails to reduce peak power use enough.

Terrorists still hold 60

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Dutch officials waged a war of nerves Saturday with Asian extremists holding some 60 hostages in a train and a nearby school. Doctors said some schoolchildren released earlier by the terrorists may have meningitis.

Police and troops surrounding the two locations threatened to attack if the terrorists harmed any of the hostages still held after nearly a week, Justice Ministry official Toos Faber said.

Despite the warnings, the South Moluccans who seized the train and school last Monday showed no sign of relenting in demands for the release of comrades jailed for terrorism and a plane to fly them all out of the country.

They also want the Dutch to pressure Indonesia into granting independence for their Pacific island homeland, which was once a Dutch colony.

President gone fishin'

Legislature hard put to resolve prison issue

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — It's getting to be a constantly asked but never answered question before the Missouri Legislature: "What kind of prison should be built and where?"

And although state Sen. Donald Manford prophesied Thursday that the Senate's decision to fund one, new, maximum security prison "would set the state's course on corrections for decades," another state official predicted Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale would go to bat for another plan to build an already planned medium security facility near Kansas City.

As the Senate voted overwhelmingly to support its Appropriations Committee's plan for a small, maximum security prison, Teasdale met for 30 minutes with Social Services Director James Walsh, who has been traveling throughout the state the past three months searching for a medium security prison site.

Walsh had selected and Teasdale endorsed locating the 500-inmate, $21 million prison at a place called Birmingham Bottoms in Liberty, just northeast of Kansas City. But when the Senate Appropriations Commitee reversed the legislature's previous two years of endorsements for the medium security concept and decided to fund the maximum institution, Teasdale said he was willing to go along with whatever the legislature decided.

"He has definitely changed his position. He's ready to go with the Birmingham Bottoms site," said Walsh. "He's no longer going to leave it (site selection) to the legislature."

As the two men were meeting, the Senate concluded about four hours of debate on the question and voted 22-8 to pledge $21 million towards the eventual construction of one $34 million maximum security prison on any parcel of land in the state which was owned or controlled by the Division of Corrections as of the beginning of this year. That limits it to several tracts the division holds in mid-Missouri.

The House version of the bill had appropriated $11 million for continued work on the medium security facility near Kansas City, and $1 million for site location and planning of a similar facility in the St. Louis area.

Manford explained his committee's position, saying the one new maximum facility could be used to house the estimated 500 hard core non-rehabilitatable inmates currently allowed to intermingle with the 1800 less dangerous convicts at the state's current maximum security prison, the Missouri State Penitentiary here. When the new facility is built and the hard core inmates removed to it, the penitentiary would be converted into a large medium security prison, Manford said.

But Sen. A. Clifford Jones, one of two Appropriations Committee members who had voted against the new proposal, said the Senate was again trying to sidestep the question of what kind of a prison to build and where.

At one point during the debate, St. Louis County Democrat John Schneider said, "I feel like we're flopping around here, and the only question we're asking is 'Is it going to be in my district or not'."

A scarlet-faced, fist pounding Jones bellowed that the money the Senate was appropriatiing Thursday would never be spent, as in previous years, and that the Senate was trying to again avoid the prison question. He said the overcrowded conditions which currently plague the state's corrections system would result in a riot similar to the devastating penitentiary disturbance of 1954 when five prisoners were killed, a number of guards and inmates injured and $4 million in property destoryed.

"I will not go through another riot. Don't make me go through another 1954 again," the St. Louis County Republican said. "Now are you going to build a penitentiary or aren't you?" he asked as he sought support for his amendment to appropriate a one-time amount of $25.5 million to plan, locate and construct one prison.

He said he wouldn't mind if the facility was built in his district.

A group of residents near the Birmingham Bottoms location have opposed it, and Rep. Stan Thomas, D-Liberty, has offered a resolution in the House urging Teasdale to go along with the Senate committee's decision.

Sen. Phil Snowden, D-Gladstone, who represents the area where the medium security prison is to be located, is noncommittal on the site, saying he wants to hear from more residents before opposing it.

It was opposition from state Sen. Truman Wilson, D-St. Joseph, that kept the medium security prison from being built near that northwest Missouri city last year.

The legislature has been dickering with the question of a new prison since 1968.

There were plans to build a maximum security prison in 1972 near the Bootheel community of Steele, but those plans were scrapped by then-Gov. Warrne E. Hearnes. Corrections officials said at that time the next prison facility needed to be located in an urban area to provide more facilities, more rehabilitation resources and more diversity in the selection of prison personnel.

The Senate voted to resurrect the Steele idea with the 22-8 vote to approve the $21 million appropriation for a maximum security prison, and then rejected 2-28 Jones' amendment to appropriate a separate $25.5 million for the complete construction of a medium security prison.

The votes came as the Senate considered the state's capital improvements bill, which funds state building projects for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The Senate approved its version of the bill 30-2 later in the day, with Jones and Schneider dissenting.

The Senate bill totals nearly $126 million, while the bill approved in the House is $114.4 million. The differences will be worked out in a compromise committee of the two chambers.

Manford said the overwhelming Senate vote to support its Appropriations Committee would bolster the Senate side in the compromise negotiations with the House on the prison question.

If the plan to build the medium security prison near Kansas City is eliminated by the compromise committee, it could be restored by the full House.

The dispute over the prison could jeopardize the timely passage of the capital appropriations bill, since the legislature is working against a self-imposed June 8 deadline for finishing work on the state's budget one week before the constitutional adjournment of the General Assembly.

The deadline is designed to get the money bills out of the way before the final, hectic week of the session.

If the General Assembly misses the deadline, it will continue a three-year-old tradition of suspending its own rules to allow for the late consideration of the budget bills.

Walsh said Teasdale is going to be lobbying the Senate very strongly. "I think the House is with him."

"He's going to work very hard with the Senate and the House for the Clay County site. He doesn't buy my position that he should buy the land and start development under the present (appropriations) law, but I'm still working on him," Walsh said.

Corrections officials had concluded verbal negotiations with landowners of the Clay County site but the deal was placed in limbo when the Senate committee made its decision.

Devil hurlers earn 1-A crown

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

LEBANON— "With our pitching, we've got as good a shot as anybody up there," was Chaffee baseball coach Mike Payne's analysis of his team's chances going into the Class 1-A State Tournament.

Payne's forecast would have made even the Amazing Kreskin proud. The Red Devils got standout mound performances from Scott Wachter in Friday's 3-0 victory over St. Joseph LeBlond and from Lindy Duncan in Saturday's 8-1 championship win over Dixon as they claimed the 1-A Missouri title for the second time in three years. The Red Devils were champions in 1975.

Chaffee, which earned victories over Twin Rivers and Lilbourn in th Regional playoffs at Leadwood a week ago, made it look easy in the state competition. Wachter and Duncan gave up only five hits between them in the two-game tournament. The only run that either man gave up in the event came when a Dixon player scored on a wild pitch by Duncan in the fourth inning of Saturday's game.

Wachter enjoyed big games in both contests. His shutout pitching sparked Chaffee in the Friday contest, and he set a state record by driving in five runs in the Saturday game, topping Garry Zellinger's record of four in 1954. Zellinger hit a grand slam homer that year.

Duncan nearly became the second Devil to write himself into the tournament record book with his strong mound stint Saturday. His 14 strikeouts were one short of the championship game record of 15 set by Frank Baumann of St. Louis Central and Jim Johnston of Normandy in the early 50's.

Chaffee struck early against the defending state champions, who had defeated Lilbourn 11-2 to win it last year. The Red Devils tallied seven time in the first two innings, with Wachter swatting a two-run single and a three-run homer and Duncan blasting a two-run clout. Chaffee got a sacrifice fly in the third to add their final run of the afternoon.

Duncan, who finished the game with three hits at the plate, struggled with his control throughout the contest, despite tossing a two-hitter and giving up only one run. An Associated Press story said that Duncan walked 14 batters, a report which Payne said was probably too high.

In Friday's contest, Wachter earned his ninth victory of the season for the Devils against St. Joseph LeBlond. An it was he who scored what proved to be the winning run for Chaffee in the third as he reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and came in on Duncan's single. Duncan had two of Chaffee's six hits in th Saturday game.

Chaffee scored two more times in the fourth, tagging loser Geiger for a pair of unearned tallies. Anthony Austin singled to start the rally, and a walk to Kevin McGuire gave the Devils two on. Randy Horrell was hit by a pitch, and Logan came in to pitch for LeBlond. Tony Dalton's grounder to short was thrown away by Marriott, allowing both McGuier and Horell to cross the plate.

The success at Lebanon capped a big turnaround for the Devils. Injuries to Wachter and catcher Don Kiefer were partly responsible for the team's surprisingly slow 6-5 start, but wins over Twin Rivers and Sikeston in the Chaffee Invitational Tournament got the club moving.

No box score was available on Saturday's championship game.

Saints' rocky start in Bi-State League continue

Something about little-league-sized Capaha Park brings out the little leaguer in the Sikeston Saints. While absorbing their second straight loss to the Caps the Saints made seven errors in an 11-3 fiasco. Sikeston, second-place finishers in both the pennant race and the playoffs a year ago, are in the Bi-State basement at 0-2.

The seven errors brought to 13 the Saints' miscue total in two encounters with the Cape Girardeau team. Sammy Taylor started and absorbed the loss for Sikeston. Don Buechting, from Festus, Mo., grabbed the win.

Leftfielder Bill Criscione of the Capahas belted two homeruns. The first was a solo shot and the second followed a dropped pop fly, giving him three rbi's. Clay Vangilder also homered.

Bill Schatzley had both Saints runs batted in. Rick Eisenbach was 3-for-4 with a walk for the losers. Centerfielder Ronnie Baker had two hits.

Leadoff man David Gross started the game with what was the story for the whole game. He hit a fly ball to right that should have been caught and ended up at third after a throwing error. He scored on a fly ball.

"It was just a circus," said one Saint, "...a bunch of clowns out there."

The Sints hitters were better prepared than the fielders. They reached the hard-firing Buechting for nine dafeties, but his fielders pulled off a pair of line-drive doubleplays to get him out of trouble.

The Saints had four basehits in the first inning-and-a-third, yet failed to score. Since Cape scored in every frame but the seventh, the game was never really in doubt.

Sikeston hosts Ste. Genevieve Sunday afternoon in a 2 p.m. game Lefty Glen Alexander will be on the mound as the Sikeston team looks for its first win.

Horse earns beer by racing

CASSELBERRY, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Marshal always knows when it's race day. That's the only time the 10-year-old horse is denied his usual daily fare of two six-packs of beer.

"Old Charlie will suck all the beer you can give him and never spill a drop," says owner-trainer Sam Ridgeway. "It really doesn't harm him none and seems to make him a happier horse."

Charlie, who is also is fond of steaks and cold cuts, is known as "a nice quiet drinker" at the Seminole Harness Raceway near Orlando, says Ridgeway.

"There's nothing to it," says Ridgeway. "Charlie's more like a pet hound than a horse. ... He started guzzling beer when he was 3 and that was seven years ago."

The galloping guzzler's abstinence on race days is not voluntary since track stewards insist on sobriety. But Ridgeway says the dry periods affect Charlie so that the horse will start whinnying at the crack of a pop-top.

"I got him back a few months later," says Ridgeway. "Charlie's such a rugged individualist as horses go, if not a downright nut, that nobody else knows how to handle him."

Although Charlie has come in fifth in his last eight races, he has a lifetime mark of 2:07 for the mile run and has earned nearly $40,000 in his career.

"He's never been a stakes champion like some other horses I've developed, but Charlie's a good steady trotter," says Ridgeway. "His winnings average about $5,000 and that's enough to keep the beer flowing."

Reitz blast in third sends Birds past Expos

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Reitz slugged his second home run in as many games, delivering a three-run blast in the third inning to power the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-5 triumph over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Reitz' homer highlighted a four-run inning that sent the Expos to their fourth straight loss and their 15th in their last 17 games.

The Expos jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the opening inning but St. Louis closed to 2-1 in the second and erupted in the next inning against right-hander Don Stanhouse, 3-7.

St. Louis then closed to 2-1 in the second and erupted in the next inning against right-hander Don Stanhouse, 3-7, after Lou Brock touchedoff the assault with a single.

Montreal scored in the eighth on Brock's two-base error in left field and Cash's single. But St. Louis bounced back for two runs in the bottom of the eighth before Del Unser smashed a two-run homer in the ninth.

Brock swiped two bases, giving him 871 for his career and only 21 behind the stolen base career record set Ty Cobb.

Cards' second basxeman Mike Tyson was apprently screened by umpire Ed Sudol on the play and Cash raced to third base when the smash went under Tyson's glove for a single.

Valentine followed with a double that scored Cash. After Tony Perez grounded out, Speier crossed the plate on Cromartie's grounder to shortstop.

Prior to Reitz' homer, St. Louis closed to 2-1 in the second inning when Keith Hernandez doubled, advanced to third on Reitz' single and scored on Dave Rader's sacrifice fly.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Can the Portland Trail Blazers come back?

"We're down 2-0, but that doesn't mean the series is over," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay, who hopes his club will start its comeback with a victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in Sunday's third game of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series.

The game will be nationally televised by CBS starting at 3:30 p.m., EDT.

The Portland players aren't quite ready to give up.

"We are a long way from dead," declared forward Maurice Lucas. "We won't lose our confidence," promised guard Herm Gilliam. "Obviously we have to play better, and this is too great a team not to do that."

The move from Philadelphia, where the Sixers posted 107-101 and 107-89 victories, to Portland's Coliseum should help the Blazers, who have won their last six playoff games at home.

"The series started with them having the home-court advantage, and they kept it, that's all," said Blazers' guard Lionel Hollins. "Now we're going to be at home."

"We have upheld our home-court advantage so far, but now it swings to them," said Philadelphia superstar Julius Erving. "I'm sure they'll be tougher on their home floor."

To win, says Ramsay, the Blazers have to play their game.

"They scored 107 points against us," observed Ramsay, "and we can do better than that. We have just got to play our game. I'm not worried about what they do; if we play our game, we can win."

Portland averaged 111.7 points per game during the regular season, third highest in the NBA, but hasn't approached that figure in the two playoff games against the Sixers.

"Philadelphia is playing very well and some of our troubles have to be attributed to that," said Ramsay. Adds assistant coach Jack McKinney, "I would say it was about 50-50 between our mistakes and their good play that put us where we are in this series."

Where the Blazers are is against the wall. They must win Sunday, or else face the next-to-impossible task of taking four straight from the multi-talented Sixers.

To win, Portland will have to get its offense untracked. And that means three things.

First, the Blazers have to get their running game going. "We've been able to control their fast break, which has taken away one of their big weapons," said Sixers Coach Gene Shue. The Blazers need that weapon back in order to win.

Second, when Portland has to set up, it must be able to score on its back-door and give-and-go plays, where center Bill Walton gets the ball and feeds it to players cutting to the basket for layups.

Third, the Blazers have to cut down on their turnovers, 63 in the first two games.

"We're running an ineffective offense and we're turning the ball over," said Ramsay, summing it all up. "That's why we're losing."

350,000 expected 61st Indianapolis 500 today

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Walk through Gasoline Alley the day before the annual Indianapolis 500-mile automobile extravaganza and the air feels a little heavier.

The activity at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway appears less frenzied than at any time during the two critical weeks leading up to the world's richest race, but don't you believe it.

It's time for the last-minute engine work that can mean the difference between the checered victory flag and the adulation of millions of race fans and a sudden and very unsettling meeting with a concrete wall at 200 mile an hour.

The failure of a two-bit part has cost at least one driver—Joe Leonard—a triumph that might have made him wealthy and famous—not a guaranteed payoff, but one that has been enjoyed by more than one Indy victor.

When the 33 glamorous and glistening championship cars take the parade lap before Sunday's 61st running of the Memorial Day Classic, it will be a tossup who will feel the trepidation more, the driver taking life in hand in the form of a steering wheel or the mechanic who has put the powerful machines together over and over while seeking perfection.

The 2.5-mile oval track surrounds a sprawling infield area where the race-day inhabitants, who cough up $7 for a general admission ticket, generally are more interested in eating chicken, drinking beer, sleeping in the sun and watching scantily clad members of the opposite sex wander aimlessly throughout the long race day.

Most of the spectators arrive early, spending as much as several hours fighting the traffic to get in only to find the same jam-up awaiting their tired and often overheated departure some time in the late afternoon.

But, strangely, many who come to this celebration of speed and danger find they are drawn back year after year.

Red Sox outslug Royals

BOSTON (AP) — Designated-hitter Jim Rice drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a single Saturday, helping the Boston Red Sox to rally for a wild 17-12 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Rice, beaten out for the regular left-field job by veteran Carl Yastrzemski, drilled a two-run homer off Larry Gura in the fifth, belted another two-run job off Marty Pattin in the sixth, and then lined a run-scoring single in the seventh.

Yastrzemski, Carlton Fisk, Dwight Evans and George Scott also homered for the Red Sox, who lead the American League with 60 homers in 42 games.

The Royals jumped to an 8-2 lead with a five-run fourth inning. However, the Red Sox bounced back with two runs on Fisk's ninth homer in their half of the inning and then exploded for seven runs in the fifth.

World record crappie made someone good meal

COLUMBIA— The biggest crappie you ever saw ... you never saw.

After two years, a fish story to end fish stories has surfaced. Clyde Moore, creel census clerk for the Department of Conservation, checked a crappie one night on Table Rock Lake.

The lady was in a hurry and the fish was not weighed, but it was measured -- twice because the measurement was so incredible. The crappie was 23 inches long.

Now that might not mean much to anglers conditioned to weights. But the world record white crappie, largest of the two species recognized, was 21 inches long in Field and Stream magazine's listing.

Okay, you say, the creel clerk probably mistook a white bass for a crappie. Department of Conservation creel clerks don't make mistakes like that, but even assuming he did....

Field and Stream's world record white bass measured 19½ inches. Moore estimated the fish would have weighed near six pounds. The F&S record crappie weighed five pounds, three ounces and the white bass 5:05.

He tried to tell the lady that she probably had at least a state record on her stringer, but she indicated she didn't care and was he through measuring yet?

State records must be authenticated as to species and weight by a qualified Department of Conservation employee and before Field and Stream or the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame will authenticate national records, the state record must be authentic.

As an afterthought, the lady told Moore yes, it was a big crappie--big enough, she was sure, to feed the whole family....

Cubs move into first

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Morales' bases-clearing double keyed a five-run sixth inning Saturday and sent the rampaging Chicago Cubs to a 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The triumph was the fourth straight and 20th in the last 25 games for the Cubs, who vaulted past the Pirates into first place in the National League East by one-half game.

Jim Rooker had a 2-0 lead and a one-hit shutout going into the sixth when the Cubs struck. Ivan DeJesus walked, and singles by Gene Clines and Larry Biittner produced one run. Bobby Murcer singled to fill the bases and Morales followed with his three-run double. Singles by Manny Trillo and George Mitterwald off reliever Kent Tekulve produced the final run.

Truman takes 2A flag

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two Lindbergh errors and a triple by Jeff Barnard gave Truman Independence a 6-3 victory in the Missouri 2A High School Baseball championship Saturday afternoon.

The championship victory, bolstered by seven strikeouts from Truman's winning pitcher Bruce Sampson, 8-2, came on the 39th birthday of retiring Truman coach Clyde Kupli.

A walk and two Truman hits loaded the bases. Then Lindbergh short stop Jeff Lenger gloved a ball deep in the hole and threw to third, too late to get the runner. One run scored on the error.

On the next play Lindbergh third baseman Tim Sundhausen let a ball slip under his glove, scoring another run. Then with the bases still loaded Barnard, a sophomore third baseman, banged a three-run triple off the left center field fence, closing out the scoring.

Truman finished the season with a 23-3 record; Lindbergh was 18-9.

. In Memoriam

In Loving Memory
Jesus came and took him
One cold April day,
And we read in the Bible
It would happen just this way.
We always took for granted
When we had him so near,
That we could sometimes touch him,
He would always be here
Jesus told us long ago
To love with all our might,
Lest he came unexpectedly
Like a thief in the night.
But he left us one comfort,
When Father went away,
He gave us loving memories
We cherish everyday.

The wife, children, and grandchildren of Roy L. Rhyne, Sr.

2. Card of Thanks

We wish to take this opportunity for the purpose of thanking those who sent wonderful floral arrangements, food and other kindnesses to us during the time of our sorrow. Especially do we thank Rev. Eldon Russell, Rev. John Rhame, The Welsh Funeral Home, and the pallbearers. Those kindnesses will be remembered always.

The Family of
Luther Campbell

Crop sprayer dies in crash

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Charles Aubuchon, 30, a flying crop sprayer, was killed Saturday when his plane ran into some power wires and crashed on a farm in the Black River bottoms about 15 miles south of Poplar Bluff in southeast Missouri.

The Butler County sheriffs's office reported Aubuchon was making his first low pass over the farm of Johnny Slusher about 10:30 a. m. when he hit the power wires and they sheared the cockpit from the plane. Aubuchon was thrown out and the plane crashed and burned.

The crash was about 1½ miles north of the intersection of Missouri 1142 and Butler County Route HH between the towns of Neelyville and Broseley.

Aubuchon's home is in Poplar Bluff and he was a pilot for the Linus Hayes Flying Service at Broseley.

modities. The United States rejected this as unrealistic and unworkable, but has agreed to further studies through the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

—Aid. This is an area of mostly promises. The United States will support a "special action program" to help the very poor countries of Africa and South Asia, but only if the conference ends happily.

The industrialized world now gives about $14 billion in aid to underdeveloped countries with the U.S. share about $4.3 billion, including contributions to international agencies.

The rich countries will make a generalized and unspecific promise to increase the figure and to improve the "quality" of some loans by removing some existing conditions.

—Debts. The industrialized countries are not in complete agreement on the issue. The European Common Market favors a $1 billion program to help poor countries pay off their external debts, but the Carter administration is unsure about this approach because of doubts that Congress would accept it.

The rich countries are of a single mind, however, in totally rejecting a proposed general moratorium on the payments of all such debts.

Richard Cooper, undersecretary of state for economics, says the United States might consider a moratorium on a case-by-case basis, but a general delay is unacceptable.

—Energy. This is not considered one of the crucial areas by the United States, which feels the conference has provided only a useful forum for discussion. The proposals here will deal only with promoting future discussions.

—Investment. This is involves promises of a continuing effort to promote capital investment, but mostly by strengthening existing procedures. The main industrialized goal is to get the poor nations to acknowledge that the development of natural resources must be expanded.

—Trade. This is another secondary issue in the eyes of the rich countries. They will limit themselves to a promise to open markets, but only if theeandtter development of resources.

Night club fire kills 40

SOUTHGATE, Ky. (AP) — A raging fire at a night club killed at least 40 persons Saturday night, a fire official said. He blamed many of the casualties on panic.

Southgate Fire Chief Dick Riesenberg, who gave the death toll, said more persons were trapped inside the building in this Kentucky community across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

Screams could be heard from people trapped inside the two-story Beverly Hills Supper Club, one of the largest night clubs in the Midwest.

The fire chief said the blaze was out of control.

Singer John Davidson, a frequent guest host on television's "Tonight" show, was about to go on stage when the fire broke out. He was reported safe.

One witness counted 15 bodies at the south door of the building where a priest was giving the last rites.

"Everything was under control until the smoke broke out," said Ernie Doctor, 50, of Columbus, Ohio. His wife, Rose, said people began screaming and running for the doors when they spotted the flames.

The fire burned through the Empire Room, where Davidson was to appear. Flames also blazed through adjoining dining rooms.

One patron said a busboy broke up the act of comedians Teter & McDonald and told people there was "a small fire in the kitchen" and for everyone to move out quickly.

Black smoke poured in as the doors were opened and the panic began, witnesses said.

Bartender Gil Broadbeck said, "Suddenly the smoke hit and people began jumping over the bar. It was so thick, I couldn't get a breath a foot above the floor."

The fire broke out about 9 p.m.

Reporters at the scene had to leave their cars and run nearly three miles because of massive traffic snarls as hundreds of firefighters and ambulances poured into the area.

Larry Manfield of Ashland, Ky. a former fire chief at South Point, Ohio, said he was with a group of 80 persons in the Cabaret Room.

"I went around the whole building, looking for members of our group and I only saw a couple. I saw two or three among the bodies. We had just got out of the door when a gust of fire broke out. People were running."

Mrs. Richard Rust and Madonna Braun, doctors' wives, said they were with a party of 30 northern Kentucky doctors in the Viennese Room.

"The bus boys were wonderful," said Mrs. Brown. "I've never seen anything like it."

The club, one of northern Kentucky's prominent gambling casinos before a reform movement drove out the industry in the early 1960s, burned down in 1970, but there were no casualties in that fire.

Following its reopening, the club maintained steady attendance by bringing in name acts such as Pearl Bailey.

Mrs. Clara Vaughn LaFont is shown here with Ed Matthews, the sixth president of the Bank of Sikeston Mrs. Lafont has known

The Bank of Sikeston Proves Its Dependability in Living Testimony

In 1895 Clara Vaughn, a 13 year old girl, came to Sikeston. She opened an account with The Bank of Sikeston, and today, 82 years later, Clara Vaughn LaFont, now 94 years old, still has an account with us. Mrs. LaFont was asked why she chose The Bank of Sikeston.

"It was the best bank," she replied. "The most reliable. There were other banks, but this one was always the best. It has been a mighty good bank, or it would not have held up this long and been the success that it is today."

Mrs. LaFont was asked if she was acquainted with C.D. Matthews, the founder of The Bank of Sikeston.

"Yes," she answered. "I have known, and done business with every one of them. I have never found a mistake in my accounts and I watched mighty close for I had to save. I would go over them as soon as I got my statements. They never made a mistake."

We at The Bank of Sikeston are privileged to have this wonderful lady as one of our customers. Her 82 year story, like ours, is the story of Sikeston. And the story of Sikeston is a fascinating saga of industrious people, progressive businesses and economic development. We are proud of our past, and confident in our future.

May 29, 1917

A special election was held in the Dogwood school district, southeast of Sikeston, last Thursday, at which time parts of other districts were added to its territory and provision made for erecting a new four-room brick school building. The district has had two teachers heretofore, but will hereafter have four and will do high school work. Harry Crouch, who is now working for the H. & H. Grocery, was principal of the Dogwood school last year, and has been re-employed for next year.

At a meeting of the directors of the Southeast Missouri Fair Association last Friday night, arrangements were completed for building a new cattle barn on the local fair grounds. The board also contemplated the erection of a building to be used exclusively for exhibiting automobiles and accessories.

Twenty-nine high school students of Sikeston received their diplomas Monday night. There were 12 boys and 17 girls.

Since school has closed two more of last year's high school teachers, who had been re-elected have resigned. Miss Sora Barth, who taught English, has been offered a position in the schools at her home town of Booneville, and has accepted. W. E. Burnham, who taught science last year, has resigned in order to assist his father on their farm near Armstrong, Mo.

Ellise presented the awards to honor graduates and winners of awards and brought to a close his 16 years of service in the Sikeston schools with a simple request that he be given the same cooperation as a private citizen that he had been given as a school head. Class honors went to Eleanor Harty and Marvin Rayburn, who were tied for first place, and Eugene Struwe, who was third in the class of 72.

Amish auction strictly out of this world

WADENA, Iowa (AP) — An Amish auction is something out of this world.

Moses Schrock recently held one. He wanted to leave all his farming equipment behind and move his family from Iowa to northern Missouri to be near relatives.

Many Amish showed up in their horse-drawn buggies. Arriving in cars were some Englishmen — the designation for those who are not of Amish beliefs.

The Amish women and girls were garbed in their traditional long, black dresses, high stockings, tie shoes and bonnets. The men wore blue pants and shirts, and many had black jackets. They wore round, black felt haos. Sons were identical to fathers, but some of the younger ones had blue stocking caps.

Mrs. Schrock — mother of seven boys and one girl — and other women brewed coffee and baked cinnamon rolls to sell to the auction gathering of 150.

Going on the block were milk cans, a rocking chair, a wood-burning stove, horse collars, riding seats for horse-drawn machinery, hand lawnmowers, pump handles, a sickle, hay hooks, rope, wire, a sled and a wringer washer.

In the field were four rows of farm machinery, some of it maybe 100 years old — horse-drawn plows, grain and corn binders, manure spreaders and a thresher.

The auctioneer pointed to an ancient-looking McCormick-Deering thresher and said: "Who'll give $500 for this?" It eventually went for $60.

The last item to go was a team of draft horses. An Amish man got them for $562.

Suddenly, the aution was over. The Englishmen went to their cars, the Amish to their buggies.

The worlds separated once again.

Englishmen once called the yo-yo "the Prince of Wales toy" after King George IV (1820-1830), who spent many hours playing with the yo-yo before he ascended to the throne.

General's remarks prohibited by Military Code

Could Brown be court-martialed?

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Pentagon legal sources who have reviewed Gen. George Brown's stinging criticism of Congress believe the remarks by America's top soldier may be in violation of military law.

Citing Article 88 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the sources say commissioned officers are prohibited from using "contemptuous words" against the president, the vice president, Congress, and a host of other civilian officials, including, in certain cases, state governors and members of state legislatures.

The article, according to the language of the code, "covers both words which are contemptuous in themselves, such as abusive epithets, denunciatory or contemptuous expressions, or intemperate or malevolent comments upon official or personal acts." The code also holds that the "truth or falsity" of the words "is immaterial."

In May of last year, in his capacity as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Brown told an assembly at the National War College that Congress is like a man kibbutzing a chess match who "occasionally reaches in and moves a piece and thereby screws it up." He also said that Congress had caused "a wreck" in U.S. foreign relations.

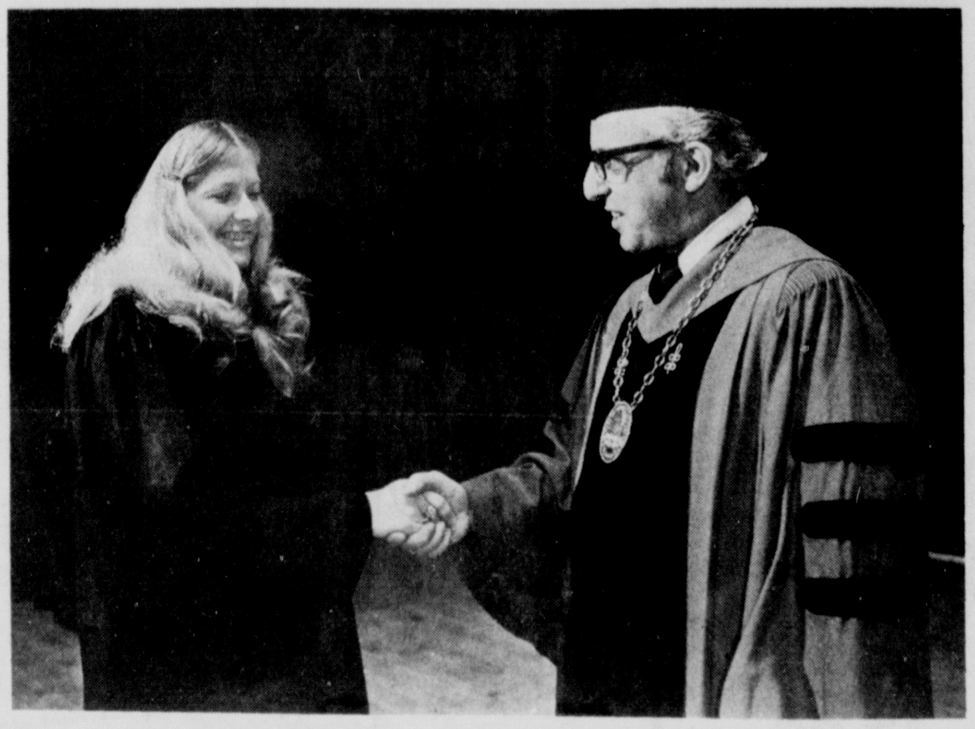
The Pentagon attorneys contacted say that under military procedure any soldier of any rank could conceivably bring charges against Brown. Because of the obscurity of Article 88, however, and the unlikelihood that such charges would be considered serious enough for court martial, no one believes the general to be in jeopardy.

Some of the lawyers say they would like to see the charges filed, but not to punish Brown. Many military attorneys think Article 88 is outdated, even unconstitutional, and should be removed from the UCMJ. They say that if Brown were charged with a violation, the publicity "would expose the article's anti-democratic origins."

As so many other of America's military regulations, Article 88 had its origin in the British Articles of War. In that nation it was used to protect "the sacred person of His Majesty." The U.S. adopted the statute in the belief that it would be yet another indication of the concept of civilian control over military forces.

In its two centuries of American history, however, the article has seldom been invoked. Prior to World War II, famed aviator Billy Mitchell was tried for insubordinate activity that included the alleged use of "highly contemptuous and disrespectful" criticism of both his military and civilian superiors. He was convicted.

Also, during the Korean War, Gen. Douglas MacArthur angered the White House with his raw opinions regarding Harry Truman's combat mentality. MacArthur was not court martialed, although some Truman aides believed he could and should have been. Instead, the seething president sacked the general and forced him into retirement.



Dr. Robert Leestamper, president of Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, congratulates Donna Cokenour DeLaney of 917 Park Avenue, Sikeston, on graduating with honors at the spring commencement on May 8. She graduated cum laude while completing a Bachelor of Science in Education with a major in elementary education.

Bill to end tax on drugs clears 1st Senate test

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Elimination of the sales tax on prescription drugs and insulin has cleared the Senate Ways and Means Committee, but chances of the House-approved measure ultimately clearing the full Senate remain slim.

The panel unanimously endorsed the $3.4 million measure on Thursday, but it must now go to the powerful Senate Budget Control Committee, which will determine whether the state can afford the bill's price tag, before going to the full chamber.

Meanwhile, the House Economics Committee delayed any action on the controversial "big truck" bill until at least next week. Committee Chairman James Russell, D-Florissant, said the delay was because several committee members were absent from Thursday's meeting.

The sales tax exemption for prescription drugs and insulin would also apply to prosthetic devices like artificial limbs or eyes. House sponsor Bob Feigenbaum, D-St. Louis County, says it is the last piece of tax reform legislation alive this session.

Feigenbaum told the Senate panel it was unfair for persons to be taxed because they are ill, and he pointed out that 35 states have already exempted drugs from the sales tax.

Time is working against ultimate enactment of the bill, however, since it must still clear another Senate Committee and then go to the floor with several dozen other measures ahead of it.

But Senate Democratic Floor Leader John Schneider, D-St. Louus, while acknowledging it would be difficult to obtain the two-thirds vote to insure the bill's consideration, said he would explore other ways of getting it before the full Senate.

The proposal for heavier, longer trucks, which easily cleared the Senate early this year, was sent to the Economics Committee two weeks ago by Speaker Kenneth Rothman over objections of supporters that the move thwarted the will of the House.

Several weeks ago, the House voted to schedule the bill for debate, overturning the decision of its Consumer Protection Committee which had twice defeated it.

Although the bill will not be reported to the full House, should it clear the committee, until there is less than two weeks left in the legislative sesion, it will go to the top of the schedule of bills to be considered.

The House version of the measure calls for a 30 per cent hike in the fees for the bigger trucks and retention of the 46-foot limit on trailer lengths. But Sen. Norman Merrell, D-Monticello, sponsor of the original bill, says he endorses the House version.

Backers of the measure say it will save fuel and reduce the transportation costs for goods. But critics contend the bigger trucks are unsafe and will tear up state highways, increasing th money needed for road maintenance.

Judge's views on rape draws feminine protest

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A county judge who says rape is a normal reaction from juveniles exposed to provocative clothing in a sexually permissive society is under fire from women demanding his resignation.

Sixty people picketed the city-county building here Thursday, protesting comments made Wednesday by Dane County Judge Archie Simonson in the case of a 16-year-old girl raped by three boys in a school stairwell.

At a disposition hearing for a 15-year-old boy who in January had pleaded no contest to charges of second-degree sexual assault, Simonson said the boy's reaction was understandable.

Complaining about provocative women's clothing, Simonson asked, "Should we punish severely a 15-or 16-year-old who reacts to it normally?"

Asst. Dist. Atty. Meryl Manhardt called the judge's courtroom remarks "particularly sexist." She said the rape was the most serious crime in the history of Madison public schools.

The judge said in an interview Thursday that it was "normal for impressionable juveniles to react violently" to some women's clothing because they are "groping to decide what is proper conduct in this world."

"Their sexual juices really start to flow at 14, 15 and 16," said the 52-year-old judge. "It doesn't take much to provoke the guy. Whether you like it or not, a woman's a sex object and they're the ones who turn the man on, generally."

Simonson found the youth delinquent and ordered him to remain at home for a year under court supervision. The boy must be tutored at home and continue receiving treatment at a nearby youth center.

A 14-year-old boy accused in the case was sentenced to one year at a group home in Milwaukee. A third boy was given immunity from prosecution in exchange for testimony against the others.

Simonson said his remarks should not cause women to fear appearing before him in sexual assault cases, but the women protesters disagreed.

"Rape is a violent crime, a terrible crime, and here is a judge calling it a normal reaction," said a statement issued by the protesters, whose action was sponsored by the local chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

"Simonson's usefulness is over as far as his continued judgeship is concerned," NOW said. "What woman would ever believe that she could receive fair treatment from him?"

The protesters, including women dressed in bikinis and parkas, said they objected to Simonson's courtroom remarks, not to the punishment ordered for the youth.

Dr. Robert Leestamper, president of Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, congratulates Brenda Lou Ray of 436 Coleman St., Sikeston, on graduating with honors at the spring commencement on May 8. She graduated cum laude while completing a Bachelor of Science in Education with a major in business education.

Regulations sought against pseudorabies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department officially proposed today federal regulations intended to control the spread of pseudorabies, a serious disease of swine and other livestock.

The proposals include restrictions against the interstate shipment of all livestock — whether swine or other farm animals — that show signs of the disease.

Officials said that livestock that has been infected or exposed to the disease but do not show "clinical signs" of it could be moved with permission directly to slaughter plants. Those animals would have to be identified by distinctive earmarks.

Pseudorabies is also called Aujeszky's Disease, mad itch and infectious bulbar paralysis. It is caused by a virus and primarily affects swine but also can attack cattle, sheep and other livestock.

Officials said that the disease poses no danger to humans, either from contact with infected animals or from eating meat.

The proposed regulation will be open for public comment until July 26. Those can be sent to the Deputy Administrator, Veterinary Services, APHIS, USDA, Federal Building, 6505 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville, Md. 20782.

Pseudorabies has increased sharply in recent years, particularly in the Midwest, where most hogs are produced. There were 714 cases reported last year, compared with 225 in 1975 and 125 in 1974.

Job placements up 18 per cent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri State Job Service announced Thursday it made more than 12,000 job placements during April, an increase of 18 per cent from April 1976.

Joseph E. Dietrich, director of the Division of Employment Security, said that job openings received in local offices statewide, increased 13 per cent from April last year.

Improvement in the economy and job development contacts made by the local job service offices contributed significantly to the increases, Dietrich said.

During April 1977, there were more than 23,000 persons who filed new applications for work with the local offices, Dietrich said.

Major crimes dip 23 per cent

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Major crimes reported by Arkansas law enforcement agencies in March dropped 23 per cent from the same month a year ago, according to the state Criminal Justice and Highway Safety Information Center.

The center said 4,335 major crimes were reported in March, down from 5,661 in March 1976.

It said 448 incidents of violent crimes were reported in March, down from 459 in March 1976. Property crimes also dropped. There were 3,887 reported in March, compared with 5,202 in March 1976.

Statlers write —30— to careers

Mrs. Viola Statler has worked hard during her 25 years at Sikeston High School, whether it was her English classes or working during the afternoons with her journalism students at the Daily Standard. During the paste-up of the last Bulldog Barker for 1976-77, the journalism students, top left photo, presented her with a dozen yellow roses for their thanks and farewell. From left are Bob Lieble, Belinda Milloway, Susan Johnson, Teresa Edwards, Tory Robertson, Tina McCain and Chuck Springs. In the bottom photo Mrs. Statler helps Belinda Milloway, left and Brenda Schuchart work with columns and paste-up of the Barker. (Daily Standard photo) above needs dsp

By JILL CORTI

When the doors of Sikeston High School closed Tuesday for the 1976-77 school year, the Tony Statler's, 703 Mimosa Dr., packed up all their things and walked away too.

Mr. and Mrs. Statler retired after a joint accumulation of over 50 years of service to the Sikeston Public School System, leaving many fond memories behind.

Statler began his teaching after graduation from Southeast Missouri State University. After serving in the armed forces in World War II, he then returned to the University of Missouri at Columbia where he obtained his masters degree.

Prior to coming to the Sikeston school system, Statler taught American History and coached basketball at Diehlstadt.

"We had some pretty good basketball players too, we went to state, never did win it, but it was certainly a good honor."

Among some of Statler's stars were Harold Jones, Robert G. (Bob) Miller and J. D. Schaffer.

In 1951, he became the director of elementary education for the Sikeston school system and served in that position until 1961. It was then, that he began his present job as administrative assistant in charge of transportation and added through the years, positions in audio visual aids attendance records, state reports, school supplies and many other jobs.

During the years in the education profession, Statler noted a tremendous change, "all for the better." "The atmosphere is much more relaxed than in previous years."

Statler recalls that when he first came to the Sikeston, the school system didn't even have a projector to show films with, now, "we have all kinds of audio visual aid equipment, television sets, slide projectors, recorders and even a television station set-up." When he first took over the transportation system, Sikeston had seven to eight buses, now they have 35 buses.

Also in the changes, he noted the attitude of the student body in a whole.

"Today, because, the kids are subject to more media they are looking for and reaching for more. Many wish to continue their education, in comparison to after the war they didn't care so much about education, they just hunted for jobs."

Statler says he has enjoyed his years at his profession "They have been very interesting, stimulating . . . keeps you young by dealing with young people and helps to keep a youthful attitude."

Mrs. Statler is a graduate of Sikeston High School. She attended Southeast Missouri State University where she met her husband. They were married shortly after she graduated from SEMO and she too did graduate work and journalism work at MU.

For 25 years, Mrs. Statler has taught English, worked as sponsor of the school year book and helped with the school newspaper the "Bulldog Barker."

Mrs. Statler and her students have received numerous state and national school newspaper awards and she has had a few of her students pursue a journalism career, including Dick Vaughn, editor of the Delta Magazine.

Vaughn commented that Mrs. Statler was a "creative teacher" compared to those who were of the structured type.

Mrs. Statler, too, has noted during her teaching career many great strides in the school system, teaching techniques and students.

She added that the students are so much more "versatile" now, they have many more talents and opportunities to do more things, like travel.

Mrs. Statler noted the changes in the "Barker" during her years at SHS. She noted that they no longer mimeographed the paper off but in 1954, Charles Blanton Jr. approached her on printing the "Barker" weekly on the old letter press at the Daily Standard.

It wasn't until four years ago that Mrs. Statler and her senior journalism class were seen weekly pasting up and preparing the Barker for press. The "Barker" is published every other week.

Both the Statler's feel a highlight in their teaching careers was in 1956. It was then that they were asked by the Rotary Clubs to sponsor 27 Southeast Missouri teenagers going to Europe.

The 27 teenagers represented 14 different communities from Steele to DeSoto. While in Europe, the Statlers and students lived in various homes of other Rotarians and toured by bus most of Europe.

The Statlers love Sikeston and plan on remaining here at their home. They plan on reading, relaxing, traveling, gardening and visiting Statler's mother who still lives on a farm in Oak Ridge.

Many will miss the Statler's when the school doors open this fall but at least for 25 years they have touched the lives of many in some way.

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. John C. David

In services held recently at the First United Methodist Church of Sikeston, Patricia Murback Critchlow and John C. David were married. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, the church pastor performed the ceremony.

The bride's mother is Mrs. B. J. Murback, 706 Park Ave. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. David of Winona, Minn.

The bride chose a long sleeved floor length dress of pastel aquamarine with silver and aqua flowers on printed panel in front and back and matching garden hat with an aqua silk rose.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Judith M. Bowman, 221 Kramer, served as matron of honor.

Dear Sir:

I'd like to be a marriage counselor, or teenage counselor of some sort. How does one go about getting started, what kind of training and how long and how much will it cost? I'm really interested in this, and I believe I can help people.

Please answer -- this is important.

DOROTHY

Dear Dorothy:

As you become older, you will learn there are many types of counseling. The most complex of these is marriage counseling. The better marriage counselor needs knowledge in many areas; for example, the many problems involved in sexual matters which requires a vast knowledge of the physical as well as the psychological.

Another field of counseling takes place in school -settings. School counseling is more and more separating into academic counseling, and psychological counseling. . . the guidance department handling the academic problems, and the school psychologist handling the personal non-academic problems (such as suicide, which is second only to car accidents as a cause of death among college students).

Many churches, prisons, business firms, etc. now employ counselors. Most areas require a college degree as a minimum. Certification requirements vary from state to state.

For the present, start working with people in any way that you can. Offer to help in hospitals, homes for senior citizens, working with groups (as scouts), etc. In school, start taking psychology courses, as psychology is basic to all counseling. See your school counselor for more detail in any of the above, plus more. Get involved helping others because after all, that is what counseling is all about.

Best wishes.

Dr. Lloyd T. Dryer
Member, American Psychological Assoc.

Dear Dorothy:

In Missouri, there is no licensure for marriage counselors. This type of counseling is usually performed by social workers, sociologists, psychologists, doctors, theologians, or educators who are in private practice, agencies, clinics, etc.

Two ways in which you might work with teenagers are: (1) as a school counselor who assists students with personal, social, educational and vocational goals, (2) as a rehabilitation counselor who works with persons who are physically, socially, or mentally handicapped.

In most states, school counselors must have a master's degree (four to five years) and meet certification requirements. Many states require rehabilitation counselors to pass merit or civil service tests -- a bachelor's degree (three to four years) is minimal.

Annual tuition at four-year colleges and universities in Missouri ranges from approximately $300 in some state institutions to $3700 at one private university. Room and board varies from $900 to $1700. Books, personal expenses, and transportation will be additional costs.

The Occupational Outlook Handbook, college guides, and various resource materials are available in libraries. These should help you to expand your knowledge of other jobs relating to your interests and find schools offering the appropriate background.

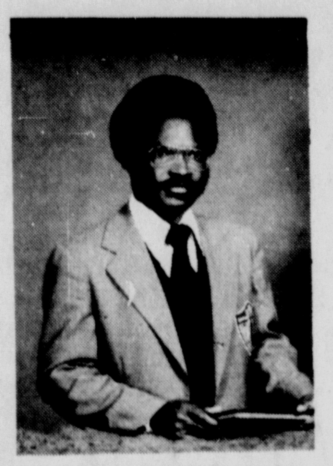
Ask the Pastor

Is rock-n-roll bad?



Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: My grandmother tells me that it is wrong to listen to Rock n Roll music, as a Christian, because it's bad for me morally and physically. At first I just laughed at her, but after reading your column and see your intelligent advice, I thought that I should ask you about it. What do you think? - Sue.

Dear Sue: People who present this music usually have bad moral characters and the influence in which they publish this music is usually under dope. Even the words of the songs encourage young people to do that which is against God's moral law, and this causes much guilt and shame to both individual and family and helps to crowd already over-filled mental hospitals.

Now, about the physical damage, not only loud music, but many home appliances cause noise pollution which causes many to go deaf.

Noise in our homes is reaching levels that can injure the human ear! Prolonged exposure to even the quieter of our modern appliances may interfere with hearing, speech, and sleep.

The risk of hearing damage rises as clothes washers, food mixers, dishwashers, vacuum cleaners, and electric knives continue to bombard us with noise. Sewing machines, food blenders, electric shavers, and food grinders are even worse. And the highest noise lovels in the home are produced by appliances which include about 4 million electric yard-care tools and 12 million electric shop tools.

For a quieter home try noise-absorbing materials on floors; use heavier drapes over windows facing loud outdoor noises; try rubber or plastic treads on uncarpeted stairs; put sound-absorbing ceiling tile in your kitchen; substitute the less-vibrating wood cabinets for the noiser metal ones; use a foam pad under blenders and mixers; install dishwashers with insulation and vibration mounts; get exercise with a hand-powered lawn mower insted of a noisy power mower; keep the volume down on your hi-fi and use a headset if others are not interested in listening; place air conditioners where their hum can help mask objectional noises, but don't face them toward your neighbor;'s bedroom; avoid noisy toys when buying for your children; and, finally, when buying an appliance compare the noise outputs of different makes before you make your purchase. For more information, check the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C. 20460.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I read your column every week and am very pleased that the Lord sent you to our country. I know what you say is the truth, but a friend of mine who is a preacher says that we do not need to believe in the Old Testament. He points out that we can eat whatever we feel like eating, because even though the Old Testament says some animals are unclean, God told Peter in the New Testament to slay and eat of the animals he saw in his vision. What do you say about that? - Rodney.

Dear Rodney: As I have said before, because a man says he is a preacher does not mean that he knows what is right or does what is right. Some preachers will know what the Bible says, but because they want to be popular, they tell a bunch of lies. For example, some say the Ten Commandments are nailed to the cross; the Sabbath is for the Jews; you can't live a holy life; the Old Testament is not for Christians - all these are lies, and these preachers are called by the Bible, false prophets. I am not here to be popular, but to help you to live right, and help to save your soul.

In 2 Timothy 3:16, 17, which by the way is a New Testament book, God says: "ALL SCRIPTURE is given by inspiration of God. . ." It did not say the New Testament, but ALL Scripture - from Genesis to Revelation, or the entire Bible.

There is nothing in the Old or the New Testament to show that unclean animals have been cleansed, no, not even the vision given to the apostle Peter. In fact, the apostle quickly discovered that his vision did not refer to foods at all but to people instead.

This surprised disciple of Christ was made to realize that no one, regardless of race or nationality, was to be thought of as unclean and unwelcomed as the Jews believed about anyone who was not an Israelite! And when Cornelius was sent by the Lord to the apostle, he would not have been received by Peter, a Jew, if God had not prepared the way by that vision. Hebrew prejudice was fierce - much the same as today. But when prejudiced Peter understood God's purpose in giving that vision, he welcomed Cornelius as a brother and put his guest as ease with the words "God hath... (showed) me that I should not call any man common or unclean" (Acts 10:28).

Even when fellow Jews chided Peter for receiving Gentiles into his house and eating with them, they "glorified God" when they heard the story of that vision and understood that by God's grace even Gentiles become brothers in Christ (read Acts 11:1-18). Meantime, forget it not, unclean foods are still unclean until the end of time (Rev. 18:2).

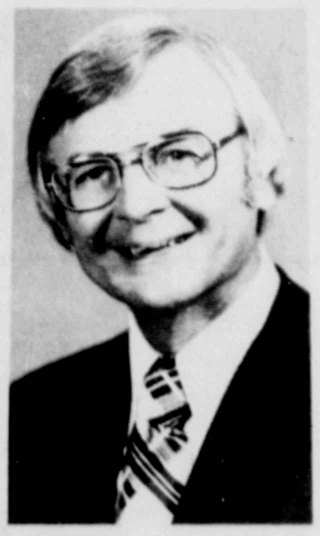
Christian joy



Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright

By The REV. DR. ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT

A spiritual awakening always comes with a rebirth of what the early Christians called "the joy of the Lord." Joy is the second gift of the Holy Spirit named by St. Paul in Galatians 5:22-23. Christian love is named first, . . . then joy.

We desperately need a rebirth of this joy in our serious and often joyless generation. We find so much sadness, cynicism, skepticism, injustice and bitterness.

Light shone in the darkeness of the early days of frontier Methodism through the luminous joy of Bishop Francis Asbury and his circuit riding ministers. Singing and preaching their joyous songs and messages of Christian love, hope, assurance, and peace, a new spirit was released in their assemblies due to the gift of spreading the experience of "abundant living" -- the joy of being.

Thank God, again today the note of celebration marks the stirrings of new life in more vital worship and loving concern in the church.

The "Good News" of God's saving and keeping grace that gives joy can and does turn despair into gratitude and it speaks with the authority of experience.

Nutrition

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, MO 65101.

Q. My family likes desserts and I feel concerned because the things they ask for most often are rich, fattening foods like cake and pie. Am I correct in thinking that desserts of this kind are unhealthful?

A. There are good reasons for feeling that rich desserts are unhealthful. Besides providing a lot of sugar and fat that we otherwise wouldn't eat they usually do not contribute significant amounts of important vitamins and minerals. Probably their most damaging feature, however, is the extra calories they add to meals which can be transformed into body fat.

Many dessert foods belong in the same class as candy, soft drinks and alcoholic beverages from the standpoint of adding "empty calories" to diets. All of these things have strong taste appeal to many people and therefore can be consumed after hunger feelings have been satisfied.

For example, a nutritious meal of green salad, lean meat, cooked vegetable, whole wheat bread and milk could readily provide one third or more of the energy and essential nutrients needed for a day. If a generous serving of rich cake or pie were added to the meal, an excess of 300 calorie or more could easily be consumed. A continuous intake of this amount of unneeded energy each day for a month could be expected to result in 2½ lbs. of new body fat, which in a year could accumulate to about 30 lbs. of excess weight.

A good argument can be made for completely omitting rich desserts from the diet. If your family has the dessert habit, serving small portions will help remove some of its negative influence.

The food value of desserts depend on the things they are made of. Milk, nuts, raisins and other fruits will add nutrients to desserts. Sometimes less fat and sugar can be used than is called for. Angelfood cake, which contains protein-rich whites of eggs as a major ingredient, is higher in protein and lower in fat and calories than other popular kinds of cake. As one might expect, adding frosting or whipped topping can greatly increase aalories (by 50 percent, in some cases).

A. No, since candy is usually more concentrated in energy than desserts, and usually contains little else of food value, while desserts can be quite nutritious. Fresh fruit is a good choice for a meal finale since fruits are sources of needed vitamins, minerals and healthful fiber. In addition, they ususally are very low in fat and tend to be low in energy value.

Fresh strawberries are in season and are an example of a healthful, low calorie fruit. A full cup of berries contains only 55 Calories and supplies about double the adult requirement for vitamin C (90 milligrams). Other healthful fruits that will be in good supply as the summer progresses include peaches, blueberries, apricots, plums, melons, etc.

Sugar should be added to fruit sparingly since one tablespoon contains 46 Calories. Since we acquire a preference for sweetness as a matter of habit, most people find they can adjust to less sugar in foods in a relatively short time.

Cheese or ice cream go well with fresh fruit, and no sugar should be needed. Note that ice cream is quite rich in energy (a cup contains 250 Calories).

Mixing different kinds of fruit creates interesting flavors, and usually makes sweetening unnecessary. Strawberries, oranges and bananas make a good combination. A little experimenting should provide other tasteful mixtures. Two USDA bulletins are available with recipes and ideas for family meals, one on fruit (MP 399) and the other on vegetables (MP 427). Contact your local University Extension Center, or write to the address above for a copy of each.

Age of Extra Crispy

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every age seems to have its symbol. The Stone Age, the Space Age, the Ice Age, and of course the 1970s -- the age of the Extra-Crispy.

I swear if I hear one more commercial where someone bites into a piece of chicken, a corn chip, or a fish stick and makes a noise like an 85-foot redwood just fell, I'm going to climb the wall.

It has taken me 20 unfulfilling years to get my kids to close their mouths when they chew food. The other night, a commercial showed a man with dentures bite into an apple so hard, I half expected to see him dribble teeth down his shirt front. As the apple sloshed and bubbled in his mouth, he opened it to reveal the contents and said, "I'll bet you wish you could do this."

"I'll say," said my son.

"He meant with false teeth," I said.

"I'd like to do that with any teeth."

Just then another commercial came on of a kid eating breakfast cereal. He trickled a little milk over it and I came right out of my chair. I have been to quieter wars. I watched mesmerized as a postman walking his beat heard the noise, came in, and poured himself a bow. So did a plumber who was working the next town. By the end of the commercial, there were about 15 people standing around the kitchen seeing how they could break one another's eardrums.

It bothers me more and more that we measure freshness by the racket it makes. If a cracker doesn't make your ears ring when you snap it, forget it. If a potato chip doesn't have you reading lips, get rid of them. If someone snapping a piece of bacon in your ear doesn't make your eyes bug out, it'll never make it to the table.

One night I was watching the tube when a woman with blue eyes looked straight at me and asked, "Have you listened to your laundry lately?" She pulled apart a blanket that sounded like a drum roll.

"Yes," I yelled back. "Mine said to me just the other day, 'Pick me to iron! Pick me!' " If there's one thing I don't need it's static from my laundry.

I liked it better when commercials relied on pure ecstasy to sell a product. Remember? They used to take a breath mint, roll it around in their mouth, roll their eyes back until you could see the whites and break out into a smile. That's not enough anymore. Toilet paper has to swoosh . . . biscuits have to dance and giggle . . . butter has to carry on a conversation. . . and colas have to come in like the tide at the Bay of Fundy.

My kids are so conditioned by television that the other night, one of them slipped out into the kitchen and attacked a freshly baked cake. In doing so, it slipped off the counter top and crashed to the floor, breaking the plate. Out of the darkness I heard a voice say, "Now, that's freshness!"

Yacht is derived from the Dutch "yaght" — a chasing ship — and the word surfaced in England about the mid-16th century. The first yacht club on record was the Cork Harbour Water Club, founded 1720.

Dear Ann Landers

When should couples bring children to dinner

Dear Ann: We are a childless couple (by choice), and our home is not child-oriented. Two couples have ruined recent visits for us by including toddlers and pre-schoolers in late dinner invitations, when they knew that we are not set up for entertaining young children.

When they go out to a restaurant they get a babysitter, but when it's just to someone's house, they don't bother. The visits were totally child-dominated and adult conversation was impossible.

I've always heard that a good social rule is to assume children are NOT invited unless they are specifically included. Please comment. Sign me -- Not Running A Day Care Center

Dear Not Running: I agree with you.

By now, you know who the offenders are. If you invite them again, tell them it's an adults-only evening and to please make arrangements to leave the children at home.

Dear Ann Landers: I am one of the many hotel telephone operators who work at a big metropolitan hotel, and our switchboards are always very busy.

During certain periods of the day we are run crazy with all the lines going at once. It's impossible to take long messages. Yet some people think we are social secretaries. They give us "messages" as long as letters.

Why don't they realize there are other callers besides themselves? It is impossible to give good service if ten calls are waiting and one person takes too long.

Dozens of hotel operators will be grateful if you will ask the public to show a little consideration. And please, if it takes us a while to answer a call, don't say, "Oh, you're there! I thought all of you had died." -- Griped

Dear G.: Here's your letter but don't expect it to change anything. Some people are impatient, demanding and sarcastic an they take out their frustrations on the first person they talk to -- which in many instances is you.

Dear Ann Landers: I realize you have problems greater than this one, but I've been bugged by something for a long time and would appreciate an answer.

What is the proper social procedure for entering a revolving door when a man and a woman are together?

Should the man allow the woman to enter first and then push from the rear or should he enter first and make the pushing easier for her?

Please help me. Every time I see a revolving door, I run the other way. -- Mr. O From New York

Dear New York: The man goes first. He should, however, say something -- such as, "Pardon me for going ahead but I'll do the pushing."

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Rufus changed his lifestyle at age 70. Instead of chasing around after women, he went speeding around in his new car.

The car had been advertised as having more power than Tyrone, and, unfortunately, it also had more power than Rufus could handle. While cruising along a highway at 115 m.p.h., he was unable to slow down in time to avoid crashing into the rear of Hida's automobile -- which had been proceeding in front of his car at a legal rate of speed -- and he bounced her and her automobile into a roadside haystack.

Emerging from the wreckage looking like the Scarecrow from the Wizard of Oz, Hilda blamed the accident on the manufacturer of the car and sued the manufacturer for her multiple injuries.

"To produce a vehicle that can go over 100 m.p.h.," she charged in court, "is pure negligence. In the hands of an irresponsible driver, it can be as lethal as a machine gun. And to compound its negligence, the manufacturer encouraged the buyer to go fast by promoting the high speed capabilities of its cars."

"We make automobiles," responded the manufacturer, "and not the rules of the road. If a person wants to speed, that's his business and not ours. We're manufacturers, not our brother's keeper."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the manufacturer liable for Hilda's injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that the manufacturer of an automobile is not required to make it impossible for a motorist to break the law. Speed limits are posted and the obligation to obey them is upon the motorist. And, concluded the judge, if a manufacturer has the right to make cars that are capable of high speeds -- which right the manufacturer has -- the manufacturer also has the right to advertise his merchandise accordingly.

Advance planning pays when traveling by air

Associated Press Writer

Travelers have a wider-than-ever variety of air fares and travel packages to choose from this summer, but figuring out which one is best can be harder than finding your way around a strange city.

Advance planning — and paying — can cut costs considerably. The round-trip air fare between New York and London can range from $259 to $1,312 for example. But there are restrictions attached to most of the bargains, so it pays to know exactly what you want and when you want it.

The biggest boom has come in charter flights, with some industry sources estimating that 30 per cent of all trans-Atlantic travel this year will be on charter flights. Ten years ago, only 5 per cent of the flights were charters.

Lower prices also are available on regularly scheduled flights under excursion plans involving limits on the amount of time you spend at your destination and, in some cases, requiring payment well in advance.

For excursion fares within the United States, you generally have to stay 7-30 days, buy your ticket two weeks in advance and pay extra if you fly on the weekend.

Excursion fares to Europe are usually available for stays of 14-21 days and 22-45 days. With one exception, you do not have to pay in advance. There is no penalty for cancellation; weekends cost extra.

The exception is the "APEX" fare which allows you to stay 22-45 days and is lower than the regular 22-45 day excursion. In exchange for the savings, you must buy your ticket 45 days before departure. There is a penalty for cancellation, although you can take out low-cost insurance for about $15 to protect yourself against this possibility.

OTC — The letters stand for one-stop tour charters and the flights have been operating since 1975. You must purchase the ticket from a travel agent. The package includes air fare, ground accommodations and some services such as a guided tour. You have to buy your ticket 15 days in advance for flights in North America and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is a minimum stay of four days, three nights in North America and seven days, six nights, elsewhere. There is no refund if you cancel.

ITC — Inclusive tour charters, which are often described as "vacation packages." They include air fare, ground accomodations and services and stops in three cities at least 50 miles apart. You do not have to buy your ticket in advance, but you must stay at least seven days. If you do pay in advance, you may face a penalty for cancellation; it depends on the tour operator. The ITC fares are higher than the OTC packages because there are fewer restrictions.

ABC — Advance booking charters are the newest type on the market, authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board late last year. They allow you to purchase air fare only under a charter plan and are ideal if you want to stay with friends or shop around for your own hotel. There is no minimum stay required for ABCs in the United States; if you want to go to Europe, you have to stay seven days. You must buy your ticket 45 days in advance for Europe and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is no penalty for cancellation if the tour operator can find a substitute passenger to take your place.

TGC — Travel group charters may include transportation only or may be offered as part of a package with land arrangements. There is a minimum stay of 7 or 10 days required, depending on where you are going, and you must buy your ticket 60 days in advance. There is no cancellation penalty.

Another common type of package is the one based on the GIT (group inclusive tour) fare. This is not a charter; you travel on regularly scheduled flights. The GIT fares require a group of 40 persons or more, but you do not have to put together the group or join an organization. Payment dates, minimum stay and ground accomodations included with the air fare may vary from tour to tour.

Missouri FAIR plan among best providing insurance to inner city

The Missouri Property Insurance Placement Facility, which provides insurance to 36,000 property owners in high-risk areas, has been ranked among the best of the country's so-called FAIR (Fair Access To Insurance Requirements) Plans.

Of the country's 29 FAIR Plans, Missouri's ranks ninth in providing the lowest premium cost to homeowners, insuring some $500,000,000 worth of high-risk properties mostly in the inner- cities.

"Since our inception in 1969, we have paid out $29,107,000 in claims, and contributed $656,235 in taxes that went into Missouri's general fund," said Russell E. Fink, mannager of Missouri's Property Insurance Placement Facility.

Fink commented that the Missouri FAIR Plan was able to keep the rates fairly low by carefully scrutinizing its operating, loss-adjustment, and other expenses, adding that, "This has allowed a greater share of the premium dollar to be available for payment of claims."

Missouri FAIR Plan policies provide individuals with property coverage, allowing them to qualify for bank loans, that in turn enable them to rejuvenate and maintain their homes, businesses and neighborhoods.

The 395 insurance companies participating in Missouri's FAIR Plan, spread the risk among themselves. When a policy holder makes a claim under the FAIR Plan, each insurance company contributes only a fraction of the monetary claim amount.

By spreading the risk participating insurance companies not only decrease the amount of claims among themselves, but also cut the heavy burden of paying the entire amount to the FAIR Plan policyholder.

In 1968, the Missouri legislature hoped that the FAIR Plan would meet its goal of providing insurance for all deserving applicants. In 1977 it does just that.

Some of the more interesting cases that provide examples of the Missouri FAIR Plan's response to the public's needs are listed below:

Consider the city leaders in New Madrid, Missouri, who found themselves without insurance on their municipality properties when the 30 day non-renewal notice from their previous carrier expired and they had not yet obtained insurance. The Missouri FAIR Plan bound the values immediately and kept the insurance in force under binder until such time as a policy could be provided in the conventional market place.

Look at the producer in Kansas City who called asking for assistance when the insurance on a $3,000,000 inner-city apartment project was about to expire and they couldn't obtain coverage in the conventional market. The Missouri FAIR Plan bound coverage on the property and has since issued a policy.

Or ask the principals involved in an Urban Homestead Development in Kansas City, who came to their assistance when insurance was needed on dwellings being rehabilitated for sale to qualified low-income families. The Missouri FAIR Plan provided this necessary insurance.

"A glance at Missouri's FAIR Plan proves its availability, demand and need," said Fink. "It's the key to revitalizing and re-establishing our neighborhoods and businesses within the city."

For more information on Missouri's FAIR Plan, write Russell E. Fink, manager, the Missouri Property Insurance Placement Facility, Room 730, Pierce Bldg., 112 N. Fourth St., St. Louis, MO 63102 or call (314) 421-0171.

Missouri claims 3.4 million phones

Only a baker's dozen countries in the world have more telephones than the state of Missouri.

That bit of gee-whizzery was discovered by Mary Harbert, Southwestern Bell manager, shen she let her fingers do the walking through the new, but year-old, edition of "The World's Telephones" recently issued by the AT&T Company.

Missouri's 3.4 million phones outstrip all but 13 of the 42 countries claiming 500,000 or more phones each. Mexico is about a half million short of the Show-Me state, while Greece is more than a million behind.

Harbert said it takes a year to gather, compile and publish the statistics from telephone administrations and companies around the world. That's why they reflect the count to January 1, 1976.

"The leaders haven't changed in years," Harbert said. "The United States is still way out front with 149 million phones. Japan is second with 45.5 million and the United Kingdom third with 21 million.

"Washington, D. C., still has more telephones than people -- more than 140 per 100 population -- which may interest psychologists who delve into the ways of bureaucracy."

Common stocks at a relative stalemate

By CORCKETT SCOTT

"There is no better ballast for keeping the mind steady on its keel . . . than business."

... James Russell Lowell

A Mid-South entreprenuer is doing well as owner of a mobile home business and a men's clothing store, the latter selling very expensive high styled top branded merchandise.

His investments in the stock market consist primarily of modest holdings in General Motors. Schering Plough and IBM.

"Selling mobile homes to a carefully screened clientele has been a highly profitable experience," he relates; "because there is little competition --- to date-- from speculative new home construction within the price area young families can afford.

"And by stocking fine apparel in my small town men's store with labels one would expect to find only in big cities, I find that the store is drawing business from many of the neighboring communities, as well as from my immediate trade territory."

Common stocks, he indicated, never have interested him like his two divergent and prospering busineeses.

"I may pick up some additional shares of Schring Plough," he comments; "because I believe it is a fine organization and the stock is way down in the thirties.

"IBM and GM sppear to be good long term holdings, though I probably won't buy any additional shares of either at this time."

Like so many thousands of small investors in the stock market throughout the nation, this businessman's appraisal and analysis --- and interest --- (or lack of interest in the market currently) --- is contributing to the relative stalemate in common stocks.

Much of the selling in common stocks already has taken place and shares of a great many fine companies are in strong hands "who do no neet the money" and thus are not forced to sell.

Their interest in future acquisitions is confined pretty much to good quality common stocks which appear to be on the bargain counter, like Schering Plough, for instance.

A Memphis Securities Exchange Commission registered investment analyst reminds that Schering-Plough moved up to the mid-sixties in 1975; and held above 60 for a time last year — easing to the low forties in contrast to the present price in the low thirties.

He also spoke of investor interest in the firm's future prospects, as well as the fact of its apparent bargain counter price.

Schering-Plough's product, Garamycin, which accounts for nearly one-half the firm's profits, is a top entry in the field of aminoglycosides, he said.

The Memphis analyst said Plough's Garamycin recently had been approved for winder usage in Japan. And Japan, he noted, is the top world market for antibiotics.

Schering Plough's earnings growth rate has declined in recent years, and this, the Memphis broker mentioned, contributed to the stock's depreciation, along with generally bad markets.

Another factor, he said, has been foreign currency devaluations.

The Memphis broker also spoke of another pharmaceutical equity likely to do better in the future.

It is Abbott Laboratories, and is trading in the low forties, down from a 1976 high of 55, with net for fiscal 1977 expected around $3.75 per share.

Growth in earnings for Abbott has averaged about 15 per cent a year since the early seventies, says the Memphis analyst; and with medically oriented equity having great potential, he sees the stock as a good buy for longterm holding.

The firm is a leader, he said, in highly technical specialties, including fluid systems, intravenous solutions and in medical needs in other areas such as venipuncture instruments.

Abbott is well-known in diagnostic instruments as well, and in pediatric products. The common stock is rated "A" by Standard & Poor's.

Herbicides are suggested for soybean post emergence

By JOE H. SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE — Most of our crops in the Bootheel are fairly clean but with an extended period of showers this situation could change.

We usually have problems with cocklebur, velvetlead (wild cotton) and other broadleaf weeds from now to harvest.

We have several herbicides that we suggest as postemergence treatments for soybeans.

Dinoseb (dinitro) can be used as an early treatment after the weeds emerge but before the soybeans have passed the cotyledon stage, that is before the first leaves open exposing the terminal bud. This treatment requires exact timing and even emergence of soybeans and weeds. Cocklebur, velvet leaf, morningglory, small pigweed, small seedling grasses and other weeds that emerge just before or with the crop can be controlled with this treatment.

Apply 2¼ lbs. of active ingredient when temperature is 75 degrees F to 85 degrees F when the foliage and soil is dry. Dinoseb can also be applied as a directed postemergence spray from the time soybeans are 5 to 6 inches tall up to first bloom. Use 1.5 to 3 pounds of active ingredient per acre. A surfactant will improve kill on grass seedlings.

Direct the spray to keep it off the soybean plants as much as possible. Dinoseb must not be applied higher than ½ the height of the soybean plant.

Naptalam + Dinoseb (Dyanap and others) This combination has been used for some time as a preemergence treatment up through the cracking and crook stage.

Dyanap now has a label for an overtop treatment when soybeans are in second trifoliate stage and before soybeans start blooming. Use two quarts per acre on three-inch or smaller cocklebur, annual morningglory and jimson weed. Use four quarts if weeds are three- six inches tall. Do not spray when soybean foliage is wet.

Bentazon (Basagran) has been an effective herbicide on cocklebur, velvet leaf and some other annual broadleaf weeds. It is most effective when cocklebur are in two - six leaf stage and velvet leaf is in two- four leaf stage. Larger weeds can be killed but will need a higher rate. Complete coverage of weeds is necessary for optimum control. See special label instructions for control of yellow nutsedge and morningglory.

Two-four-DB (Butyrac, Butoxone, etc.) can be used as a directed spray when soybeans are eight inches tall and weeds are smaller than beans. Use the amine form of two, four- DB. Apply 0.2 pounds - A acid equivalent for cockleburs. Use sufficient water for good coverage of weeds. Avoid treating higher than lower onethird of the soybean plant. Do not spray drought stressed soybeans or beans showing symptoms of phytophthora root rot. 2,4-DB can also be used as an overtop treatment when cocklebur or ivyleaf morningglory or both will likely reduce yield or have formed a canopy over the soybeans.

Use no more than 0.2 lb-A of the amine form. Apply when first buds start to form and until mid bloom. Soybeans should be healthy. Follow all precautions in keeping off cotton and other susceptible crops.

Early postemergence control important

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Early application of postemergence weed control treatments is a key factor in weed control in crops grown in this area. A major weed control problem in the area results from the fact that farmers are so busy about this time of year that herbicides are often applied later than they whould be for best results.

Consequently, weeds get off to a good start and are much more difficult to control. Crop yields are reduced by weed competition, and crops are often damaged in the process of controlling the weeds which increase yield losses tremendously.

The importance of early-season weed control is shown by results of soybean weed control research conducted in Arkansas during recent years. In research trials in which cocklebur infestations were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cockleburs were controlled within four weeks after the beams came up. After this time, yield reductions increased rapidly until the beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield loss at this stage.

In soybeans, Dinoseb (Dinitro) can be used as an early postemergency ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeds that comes up with the soybeans. Most broadleaved weeds are controlled by this herbicide. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant.

Dinoseb is a contact killer; therefore, it will only control those weeds that are up at the time of application.

Bentagon (Basagran), applied as a topical (over-the-top) treatment is effective in controlling cocklebur and other annual broadleaf weeds including ragweed, smartweed, and velvetleaf with little or no damage to soybean plants.

It is most effective on very small weeds (two to three-leaf stage) that are actively growing. Considerably less herbicide is needed for good control at this stage which reduces the cost considerably in comparison to the cost of later treatments.

The effective use of these early treatments results in early- season weed control before weeds have had a chance to reduce bean yields significantly. In addition, it creates a size differential between soybean plants and later-season weeds so that weeds can be effectively controlled with directed herbicide applications. Consequently, later- season weeds can be controlled with much less damage to soybean plants andyields as compared to late- season topical herbicide treatments.

Now as far as cotton is concerned, two herbicides are recommended for early topical (over-the-top) postemergence application when weeds are as tall as the cotton. Flometuron (Cotoran or Lanex) plus a surfactant gives fair control of a number of grasses and broadleaved weeds. For best results, it should be applied after cotton is three inches tall and preferably before weeds are 1½ inches tall.

DSMA plus a surfactant, applied within 10 days after cotton comes up and when weeds are less than two inches tall will give fair to good control of most grasses broadleaved weeds. Now, if the weeds are not as tall as the cotton, directing the spray from the side of the row will help to insure best weed control results with less damage to the cotton.

For corn and grain sorghum, Atrazine applied as an early, postemergence treatment will result in good control of most broadleaved weeds and fair control of grasses. For best results, it should be applied when weeds are not more than 1½ inches tall. If weeds are up at the time of application, a crop oil that is designated for use with Atrazine should be added to the Atrazine- water spray mixture for corn but not for grain sorghum as oil will damage sorghum.

Ag banker outlines farm credit problems

COLUMBIA — One of the nation's top authorites on agricultural banking outlined some of the trends and problems of farm credit before 33 bankers attending the Advanced School of Agricultural Banking meeting May 22-27 at the University of Missouri- Columbia.

Leslie Peterson, chairman of the agricultural banking division of the American Bankers Ass., said the flow of capital supplied by banks and other sources has and will continue to have more impact on agriculture than other important influences. These other influences on agriculture include government, farm labor unions, consumer groups, foreign investors and the growth of enrollment in colleges of agriculture.

"Banks are actually holding their own at a little over one half of the farm operating credit extended in this country," Peterson said. The banks' share of farm credit outlays is growing, he added, with other sources of credit being the Production Credit Associations, commercial credit corporations and the farmers Home Administration. Peterson is also president of the Farmers State Bank in Trimont, Minn.

Outlining current problems in farm credit, Peterson said, "We're seeing loan repayment ability declining." More bankers are reporting that, while the money supply is good, "they have borrowers in trouble and can't extend more credit."

Peterson pointed to a U.S. Department of Agriculture survey in a nine-state drouth area in the Midwest, with up to 18 per cent of farmers having problems paying back loans. (Missouri was not a part of the study.)

This problem is one of the reasons that the Carter administration has improved price support proposals, Peterson said.

Bankers are also "becoming a little complacent," he said. While real estate value may be high on rural property, "we haven't looked hard enough at repayment capacity.

"We find lenders willing to place more debt on land than that land has productive capability to service," Peterson said.

Another possible problem arises from the fact that the agricultural area as a healthy field for investment is attracting big banks and life insurance companies not traditionally in the field.

"However, many of these (new lenders) don't understand agriculture and they don't understand the perpetual credit needs in agriculture."

He referred to the cattle business in the depressed year of 1975 when many new investors not used to agriculture got out because they had been "burned."

"We can't have lenders who are going to get in and out of this (on a short term basis) if we're going to look for any any stability or growth."

Noting that most banks that extend farm credit are small, with individualized relations with farmers, and that these banks are "the short-term lenders and down-payment lenders," Peterson listed some questions that farm lenders and borrowers should ask themselves in loan decisions:

--"Have you exhausted the entire profit potential in the current operation?" Existing assets should be used to the maximum before any additional investments are made.

--"Do you have the management ability for the expanded operation?" Peterson said farms often develop into complex operations, and farmers then may feel overwhelmed by the decisions they have to make. Bankers have to help farmers make such crucial decisions, he said.

--"Will the proposals be profitable? Can you project it out on paper? Can the farmer avoid a cash-flow bind?"

--What is the "riskability" of the proposal? How much risk is the lender and the farmer willing to take?

Peterson pointed out that agriculture, "the single largest industry" in the U.S., is a vital force in the economy.

Experts plead for Endrin

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Experts on insect pests which destroy small grain crops pleaded that the use of the pesticide endrin not be prohibited when there are infestations of army cutworms and caterpillars known as pale western cutworms.

"The risk of not having endrin is too great, particularly when it is needed to fight the pale western cutworm," said Phillip H. Marvin, an entomologist and private crop consultant at Lincoln, Neb.

"It must be available to farmers. A large infestation could be the final straw in forcing farmers into bankruptcy after drought conditions," he said.

Marvin was a witness at a hearing before a panel from the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Its members are seeking information on how the pesticide can be used without damaging fish, wildlife and humans. Laboratory tests have shown that it can cause cancer in rats even in small doses.

The EPA's move to put heavy restrictions on the use of endrin or ban it entirely was triggered by extensive fish kills when it was used in 1976 in south-central Kansas and adjoining Oklahoma.

A member of the hearing panel from Washington, D.C., Kyle Barbehenn, opened the hearing with an assurance that the EPA has not already determined that endrin will be banned.

"If the risks can be reduced, the balance between risks and benefits may be altered and it can be used.," he said. "Hopefully, we can find some middle ground."

Dr. Wayne Berndt, an extension specialist for South Dakota State University, said that state's small grain farmers particularly need endrin because it is the only pesticide which is effective against cutworms and caterpillars in the cool months when thev usually appear.

Feed wheat, save $3 a hog

COLUMBIA — Hog producers should be able to save about $3 per hog this year by feeding wheat or a wheat- corn mix totheir animals, according to John Rea and Myron Bennett, extension specialists at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"An unusual price relationship between corn and wheat is expected during the wheat harvest," says Bennett, state extension economist. "The price of wheat may be 10 or 15 cents below corn. Wheat with garlic or other foreign matter causing discounts will be much lower."

"Subsituting wheat for corn without reducing the rate of gain potentially reduces feed costs. That increases net income," says Rea, extension swine specialist.

The UMC specialists say now is the time for farmers to prepare for this advantage.

"Take for instance a grower ration (for young pigs)," Rea says. "At current prices, an all-corn ration will cost about $6.10 per hundredweight. Corn with about 40 per cent wheat will bring that down to $5.60 per hundredweight. An all-wheat ration will run about $5.08," Rea says.

There's about a 50 cents difference per hundredweight between all-corn and the corn-wheat mix, and between the corn-wheat mix and the all-wheat ration both in developer and finisher rations, also. (Developer rations are for hogs of intermediate weights; finisher is the ration used prior to marketing.)

"Now, let's assume the all-corn and corn-wheat rations both have a feed conversion of 3.5 pounds of feed to produce a pound of pork. So, by feeding the corn-wheat ration, a farmer can save about $1.75 per hundred pounds gained. Assuming a hog gains about 180 pounds from weaning to market weight, that means about a savings of $3.15 per hog with a corn-wheat mix," Rea says.

Rea says his figures assume the feed conversion on the all-wheat ration is about 4 pounds of feed to a pound of gained weight on a pig. "The all-wheat diet is cheaper, but it may take more feed per pound of gain.

"We figure it costs about $34.65 to put 180 pounds on a hog with an all-corn ration." (Conversion of 3.5 times 5½ cents a pound average feed costs times 180 pounds of gain.) "On the other hand, the cost of feeding an all-wheat ration is about $31.68." (Conversion of 4 times 4.4 cents average feed costs times 180 pounds.)

"Whichever way he goes -- all wheat or corn-wheat -- a producer with 1000 hogs can save about $3000," Bennett says.

If a farmer wishes to use wheat as some or all of a hog feed, he should check a few things first.

--Decide which route to go -- all wheat as the grain in the ration or about half wheat and corn, both at about 40 per cent of the total ration.

"Wheat finely ground becomes pasty in the hog's mouth and they don't like it as well as corn. For this reason, wheat should be coarsely ground. Hogs occasionally go off feed when fed the finely ground wheat rations.

"However, research data has shown good performance with either a corn-wheat mixture or an all-wheat ration," Rea says.

--Check with area Extension livestock or farm management specialists to find out specific percentages of grain and additives used in the rations computed by Rea and bennett.

"Also, we are available to formulate rations for both swine and beef cattle," says Bennett. The cost to formulate five swine rations or four beef rations is $10. For this service, contact Myron Bennett, 223-D Mumford Hall, UMC, Columbia, MO 65201.

Answers to pension questions

ST. LOUIS-- Millions of Americans not already covered by pension or profit-sharing plans where they work may be able to contribute tax-deductible dollars toward their retirement as a result of the Pension Reform Act of 1974. Here are some of the more commonly asked questions, with answers, about the provisions of the law.

Q: I'm a construction worker who's had a dozen different jobs in the last ten years. Is it true that now I can set up some kind of retirement plan for myself?

A: If you haven't been an active participant during your tax year in a pension or retirement program where you work, you can start an Individual Retirement Arrangement (IRA). That means you can set aside 15 percent of your pay, to a maximum of $1,500 a year, in an account which is specifically designed for your retirement years. You don't pay income tax on the money or on the interest it earns until you start withdrawing it, at age 59½ or later, or should you become disabled.

Q: I pay Social Security tax. Does that mean I can't start an IRA?

A: No. Social Security was never intended to be retirement pay, only to supplement whatever type of pension a retiree received. Neither Social Security nor Railroad Retirement coverage makes a person ineligible for an IRA.

Q: What are the advantages of an IRA?

A: (1) annual contributions to an IRA are deductible from gross income, even if a taxpayer does not itemize deductions;

(2) interest, dividends or capital gains earned on the IRA contributions are not taxable as they accumulate; and

(3) tax is due only after funds are withdrawn from an account. This normally happens after the individual is retired or disabled and is, therefore, in a lower tax bracket.

Q: Suppose I have a bad year financially. Is there any penalty for skipping a year's deposit?

A: No. Within the permissible limits, you can deposit as little or as much as you can afford. Also, timing of the deposits is not regulated, so you can make your payments periodically or in a lump sum.

Q: Other than the maximum contribution allowed, are there any restrictions on the account?

A: Yes. Withdrawals made before the owner is disabled or reaches age 59½ are considered taxable income and subject to an additional 10 percent penalty. Deposits which exceed the limit in any given year are subject to a non-deductible 6 percent excise tax each year. And finally, withdrawals must begin by the year the owner of the account reaches age 70½.

Q: I'm thinking of setting up an IRA for myself. Can I make it a joint account with my wife if she doesn't work for a living?

A: Yes, you can start an IRA for her as well as yourself. The details on this are the same as for an employee, except that the maximum annual contribution is the lesser of 15 percent of your income or $1,750.

Q: Do I come to the IRS to start an Individual Retirement Arrangement?

A: No. To set up your IRA you should contact a bank, savings and loan or federally-insured credit union. In addition, many brokerage firms and insurance companies can get you started. The IRS has prepared a free booklet, Publication 590, "Tax Information on Individual Retirement Savings Programs" which can be obtained from most local IRS offices and contains details on all types of individual retirement savings programs.

Consumers have lost ground since 1970

Associated Press Writer

Rising wages have helped offset many of the boosts in food costs over the last two decades, but consumers have lost ground since 1970.

Figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that it takes the average production worker less time today than it did in 1965 to earn the money needed to buy two dozen basic food items. It takes him or her longer than it did in 1970, however.

U.S. consumers remain better off than their European counterparts. Although exact comparisons are impossible because of different buying habits, tastes and statistics, a spot check indicates the food share of the family budget is considerably less in the United States than abroad.

To measure the cost of food for Americans in terms of time as well as money, the Associated Press checked average retail prices, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, for 24 items in 1965, 1970 and February 1977. Using average hourly wages, including overtime, the AP calculated how long it would take for the nonfarm, nonsupervisory production worker to earn the money needed to buy the items.

In 1965, the worker would have had to spend 275 minutes — just over 4½ hours — to purchase all 24 items. In 1970, he or she would have had to spend 231 minutes — just under four hours. Today, it takes 258 minutes — a little more than 4¼ hours.

The retail prices of the 24 items went up 89 per cent from 1965 to 1977; the amount of time needed to earn the money went down six per cent. From 1970 to 1977, the prices went up 64 per cent; the time went up only 12 per cent.

Looking at some specifics, the figures show that a pound of hamburger cost an average of 53 cents in 1965. The average production worker had to spend 13 minutes to earn that much money.

In 1970, the same hamburger cost 67 cents, but the worker needed only 12 minutes to earn the money. In 1977, the cost was 85 cents, the time was 10 minutes.

A one-pound loaf of white bread cost 21 cents and five minutes in 1965, 25 cents and four minutes in 1970 and 35 cents and four minutes in 1977.

The loss of ground in the 1970s is demonstrated by what has happened to the price of such items as canned tuna and eggs. It took the average worker eight minutes to earn the price of a 6½-ounce can of the fish in 1965 and seven minutes in 1970. By 1977, the time needed was back up to eight minutes.

The time needed to "buy" a dozen, large, Grade-A eggs went from 13 minutes in 1965 to 11 minutes in 1970 and back up to 12 minutes in 1977.

Of the 24 items used in the comparison, 16 "cost" less time in 1977 than they did in 1965. Only four items — round steak, chuck roast, hamburger and oranges — cost less in 1977 than they did at the start of the decade.

Even with the increases, the consumer is better off in the United States than elsewhere.

The Sunday Times of London reported late last year on the amount of time it took an average industrial worker to earn enough money to buy 10 items. Six of the foods coincided with items on the Bureau of Statistics list and in every case, the U.S. worker needed less time to earn the price of the product.

Other indications about the position of Americans in relation to consumers elsewhere are available in figures showing what proportion of income and spending goes for food. (Note: food takes a bigger percentage of spending than it does of income, because the spending figures don't take savings into account.)

Food — including items purchased away from home — has accounted for about 16 to 18 per cent of average income in the United States in recent years. According to the latest available figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, food accounted for about 20 per cent of spending in 1972-73, down from 24.4 per cent in 1960-61.

The latest available figures from Great Britain show that just under 25 per cent of the average weekly budget went for food in the first half of last year. In 1970, 26 per cent of the budget went for food.

A report by the Bank of Italy for 1975 — the latest year available — said 34.6 per cent of all consumer spending went for food, down from 37.1 per cent in 1970.

West German figures — compiled on an income rather than a spending basis — show that the average family spent about 25 per cent of its income for food in 1976, compared to 31 per cent in 1970.

Dear Sir:

Please find enclosed another typical government study on rats equated to humans, that follows their usual logic.

Another study funded by EPA during 1975 was published in the May issue journal of the Air Pollution Association covering ozone generation from large cities. Their results from airplane sampling showed from 20 per cent to 100 per cent increase in ozone in the ambient air after passing over large cities. Since the most spray cans are used in large cities, this is a net generation number. How can we ban spray cans when we have studies that show we could have a problem from too much ozone. It would certainly help if logic had precedence over emotion in this field. It would also save the taxpayers a few billion per year.

Yours truly,
Wm. Swann

PROTECT US FROM OUR PROTECTORS

On April 15, the Public Health Department of the State of New Jersey shocked the nation by declaring that television can cause brain damage in rats.

It based this claim on an exhaustive 10 day study during which six European brown rats had their cages placed directly in front of a TV receiver that operated 24 hours a day. By the end of the test period, three of the rats had become chronically aggressive, two had taken to walking on their hind legs, and the sixth just lay in a corner of the cage with his paws covering his eyes.

Scientists and health officials from other states have tried to discredit the New Jersey findings, but their attitudes are obviously motivated by professional jealousy. How else can you regard attacks such as "the sample size was too small," "European rats don't understand American television," or "it was a scientifically unbalanced sample; they should have had some black rats and some white rats as well."

These opposing views notwithstanding, the Federal Government is expected to take action any day now. Informed sources say that this will take the form of a complete ban on the sale of television sets, except for those people who have a doctor's prescription. Rumors persist, however, that the Government will instead make it illegal for anyone to watch television while sitting in a cage.

Regardless of the specifics, any Government action will have a decided effect not only on the television industry, but also on the hundreds of compoent manufacturers who serve it.

As if all this sin't enough, our sources tell us that the New Jersey Department of Health is considering using its rats to look into the safety aspects of microprocessors, LED displays, and flat-flexible cable.

PRUNING THE BUREAUCRACY

There is no doubt that President Carter's repeated campaign promises to reduce and reshape "the horrible, bloated bureaucracy" of government struck a responsive chord in a public weary of supporting such a burden.

Ture to his promises, the President has now obtained legislation enabling him to carry out what he himself concedes was his most consistent campaign theme. The reorganization bill gives him broad powers to reform the federal bureaucracy - a hodgepodge of some 1,900 agencies employing more than two million civilians.

It remains now to see how well and faithfully the new administration delivers on its promise. There is nothing easy about bringing under control a huge and entrenched bureaucracy.

Indeed, based on administration performance to date one must counsel a healthy skepticism. Campaigner Carter promised, for example, that President Carter would cut the White House staff by 30 per cent. Instead the White House staff has grown by 30 per cent since he took office.

In fairness, there are certain structural impediments that make it very difficult to end waste and promote efficiency in government. The bureaucrat whose fief is threatened knows wiles that would make Svengali himself writhe in envy.

Moreover, many offices that should be dismantled are protected by specific acts of Congress. For example, there are 1,175 advisory boards and committees that cling to the government like limpets, and Carter quite properly ordered them weeded out.

To his dismay, however, he discovered that of this number only 16 could be dissolved simply by presidential edict. The rest, established by Congress, will endure until and unless Congress goes through the tedious business of snuffing them out one by one.

We have doublts, as we say, but nothing would please us more than to see the White House deliver on the statement it uttered when the reorganization bill was signed: "The average citizen...can anticipate that the efficiency and quality of government service will be improved."

May the pruning shears remain sharp.

WHAT DID FROST KNOW--AND WHEN?

WASHINGTON— Something happened the other night when I was watching the fourth David Frost-Richard Nixon interview, which a friend of mine calls the "Rich Man, Poor Man and Now Richer Man" series.

I found myself more interested in watching David Frost than I did Nixon. There is something compelling about Frost's personality that Nixon lacks. Perhaps it's his forthright manner, or maybe it's his striped shirt, but every time he asked a question I sat up in my chair and when Nixon answered it I dozed off to sleep.

After watching Frost for four programs I started to ask myself, "When did Frost know about Watergate, and how much did he know?" We have been told that Frost taped 28 hours with Nixon. We have only seen six of them. What happened to the other tapes? Is there a coverup going on? Doesn't the public have the right to know everything that went on during those tedious sessions in San Clemente?

Were there any gaps in the TV tape because of poor lighting or planes flying overhead? Did Frost obstruct Nixon from answering a question about his crimes? And what about Frost's tax returns? Will he pay income taxes in the United States or will the money be shipped out of the country?

Can Frost be impeached by the Alpo Dog food company for forcing Nixon to admit the President is above the law? Can he be made to resign as a TV interviewer for failing to ask why Nixon didn't burn the tapes?

And will Frost receive a pardon from President Carter after putting us through the long nightmare of Watergate once again?

The only way these questions can be answered is by setting up a Special Prosecutor's Office to find out what Frost's real role was in all this. I would suggest some respected lawyer such as Archibald Cox to head the investigation.

I think all the TV tapes should be subpoenaed, and if any crime has been committed the evidence should be turned over to the grand jury.

I am not accusing David Frost of any wrongdoing. But the country has to know all the facts if we are ever to get to the bottom of the Nixon affair.

Six hours of television is not enough to tell us all the things we wanted to know, not only about Watergate but also Kissinger's relations with the former President. We know that Nixon and Kissinger prayed together in Lincoln's sitting room. What we don't know is what they were praying for. Was Nixon praying for Haldeman and Ehrlichman? Was Kissinger praying that Ford would keep him on? This was a crucial period in America's history. We have to assume that whatever Nixon prayed for, his prayers weren't answered. But we can't be sure of Kissinger. Did he make a secret deal with the powers that be which we still don't know about? Was Frost privy to what was said in those prayers?

And did Frost and Nixon pray together after they finished their interviews? And was this taped?

Until these questions are answered the American people will continue to agonize. The only solution is to have Frost testify under oath as to what his role was in covering up what Nixon had to say about his coverup.

We know that Nixon may try for a comeback after the TV series, but the question on everyone's mind is whether Frost can make a comeback? Will the public ever forgive him for bringing Nixon back into our homes?

Will David Frost have to live for the rest of his life with the image of the first man who interviewed Richard Nixon on television after the resignation? Or will he be remembered for the good things he did before he signed up Nixon? Only time will tell.

It has been suggested that parents who have a son with the same name as the father, and who usually call him Junior or "The Second", merely tag him with "Ditto"...

Somehow, we don't believe this will be popular, at least not with the sons. The editors fathers was named Robert, so is the editor, but he sure doesn't want to be called Robert Ditto Colborn or Robert I. Colborn, Ditto. R.I. (Si) is sufficiently confusing, the Si being a nickname only.

PERCENTAGE OF MOVERS DECLINES

The rate at which Americans move each year, although high, is showing a gradual decline, according to the Bureau of the Census.

During the year ending in March 1976, 17.1 per cent of the population one year old and older living in the United States (an estimated 35.6 million persons) moved. An additional 1.1 million moved from abroad; thus, 17.7 per cent of the 1976 resident U.S. population had moved.

The annual rate of moving was 20.1 per cent during 1958-61 and 19.1 per cent duriing 1968-71.

NON-ADVERTISERS ARE HIGHER

Investigations at the national level are indicating that at least one professional group gets higher prices for its services than it would if its private code of ethics allowed its members to advertise.

The contention of the investigators is that the consumer would pay less if the members of that group were allowed to advertise, thereby encouraging competition and lower prices to the consumer.

There are at least a half dozen or so profession in whcih their organizational "code of ethics", prohibits advertising. These groups are alleged to be the highest paid in the nation for the hours devoted to their work.

There is a national move to outlaw all such private group codes of ethics that prohibit advertising, on the theory that competitive advertising by them would lower living costs for the people (the consumers) whom they serve.

These facts should be something for the buyer to ponder, and tend to induce more trading with those who tell you what they have to offer, and what it is going to cost you, through honest and fair advertising.

WORLD ORGANIZATIONS CRITICIZED

Many of the 65 world organizations to which the U.S. contributes more than $1 billion a year are "ineffective, top-heavy with high-paid officials and uncertain in their purposes," said a recent Senate report.

REFRESHING CANDOR

Now and then a refreshing bit of candor emerges from the Washington scene. One such instance of frankness shining among the general equivocation and ambiguity was the testimony of Rep. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, before the Quadrennial Commission on Executive, Judicial and Legislative Pay, concerning the proper level of pay for members of Congress.

Rep. Grassley acknowledged the difficulty of determining the productive capacity of an elected official "For instance," he said, "if one were to measure that amount of printed material generated each year by Congress and its individual members, on might determine that congressmen and senators were grossly underpaid. But if one were to judge their work on the basis of how effective Congress has been in dealing with the nation's major problems, it is clear that our elected representatives in Washington would merit a substantial cut in pay."

REDWOODS SHOULD BE SAVED

From The Washington Post

We suppose that if you have been cutting down redwood trees or turning them into lumber all of your working life, the idea of not cutting them down is hard to accept — especially if not cutting them means a substantial decrease in the number of jobs available in your community. So we understand that the demonstrations in northern California against the proposed expansion of Redwood National Park are not just somebody's idea of a spring lark. They are serious efforts undertaken by people who have a personal stake in the continued cutting of the trees. the message that Representative Donald Clausen said was being sent — "that we are going to fight to keep our jobs" — came through loud and clear.

Unfortunately for Mr. Clausen and the people for whom he spoke, there are a good many others in the country prepared to fight to keep the trees. We count ourselves among them. There are few things on earth as magnificent as those giant redwoods, and the policy of the government ought to be to preserve as many, not as few, of them as it can. Redwood National Park should be expanded. And this should be done not merely to protect the watershed of the existing park, as some have suggested, but also to protect additional trees. The question is not one of saving just a few thousand acres of redwoods so that future generations can know what they look like, but rather of saving a part of our national heritage.

Of course, such thoughts are no comfort to people who face the loss of their jobs or a decrease in their business if the cutting of these trees is ended in another large section of northern California. Their complaints need to be taken seriously because their livelihoods will be seriously affected by an expansion of the park. In this situation, it may be appropriate for the Federal Government to aid them, just as it aids those who are dislocated by other federal projects.

EXOTIC DINING

Carol Sutton, managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, recently traveled to Mexico with her family. A dining experience of a lifetime, she writes, was the Pheasant and Deer Restaurant in Merida. It features small does wandering among the tables, a dog asleep on the bar, and an alligator in front of the ladies' room.

One of Carol's daughters hesitated to step over the alligator, so a lady at the next table whacked the creature in the tail. He slithered into a nearby pool. Once inside, the girl found another alligator wrapped around the commode. Considerably shaken, she returned to the table to find a doe polishing off her sandwich.

WOULD HELP LOWER WELFARE COSTS

There is a movement at Jefferson City to make it mandatory for officials to track down fathers who have left their families for any reason and compel them, where they are able, to support their deserted families, especially the children.

Too often, fathers disappear, little or no effort is made to locate them, and if the mother is unskilled, cannot get a job, or has to spend her time taking care of the youngsters, the cost of maintaining the family falls to the taxpayers through the welfare offices.

Those who want to hunt such men down and make them financially responsible for the family they voluntarily acquired are on the right track. If successful, and many fathers are found and action taken against them, it will help lower and eliminate unnecessary costs for those whoare not responsible for that family.

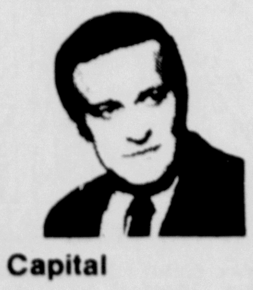
WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND



J. Edgar Still Haunts Capital

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The ghost of J. Edgar Hoover, whose bulldog visage became a national symbol of the fight against public enemies, still haunts Washington. He not only lasted on top of the bureaucracy longer than any other American, but he was also perhaps the most powerful and feared public official in the history of the republic.

Beginning with a colleciton of misfits, he transformed the FBI into the world's most formidable law enforcement agency. He set such high standards that his agents became folk heroes.

Yet Hoover was an incurable curmudgeon, conservative in his ways and narrow in his outlook, who fiercely believed the words "My country, right or wrong." In dissent, he saw sedition. The cry of black power, by his lights, smacked of rebellion. The argument of conscience against the Vietnam War, as he saw it, bordered on outright treason.

He used his enormous power as director of the FBI to uphold his viewpoints. He indoctrinated his agents until they, too, saw no wrong in committing "patriotic" crimes.

Now John J. Kearney, a crack, conscientious agent has been indicted for violating the law in the line of duty. He headed a covert-operations squad in New York City.

Agonizing pressure was brought upon Attorney General Griffin Bell to drop the charges against Kearney. The shock waves have shaken FBI morale down to the roots, Bell was warned. But he told subordinates that FBI agents must live by the law they have sworn to uphold. Agents who break the law, he declared, should be prosecuted.

He not only approved Kearney's indictment but may seek the indictment of Kearney's superior, J. Wallace LaPrade. Bell told associates that LaPrade has been "stonewalling." The attorney general indicated that he would convene another grand jury and give LaPrade the opportunity to clear the record. Otherwise, Bell indicated he would ask for LaPrade's indictment.

The late J. Edgar Hoover has given his name to the new FBI headquarters, a huge structure across the street from the Justice Department. It is an appropriate monument to his memory. Its bulk overwhelms the parent agency much as he overwhelmed the attorney general, who was supposed to be his superior.

But Griffin Bell does not intend to let the FBI again become the tail that wags Washington.

Gas Pains: It looks as if the great oil pipeline across Alaska will be surpassed by a gas pipeline across Canada, with all the cost overruns, production delays and environmental problems that have made the Alaskan pipeline so controversial.

The Federal Power Commission has recommended that a Canadian pipeline be built to carry natural gas from the north slopes of Alaska to the lower 48 states. This should greatly increase the amount of gas available to American consumers.

But buried in the files of the Environmental Protection Agency is a startling, confidential report that the $7 billion pipeline will cost the American taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars more than necessary.

Three large energy conglomerates -- Arctic Gas, Alcan and El Paso -- have produced rival plans for its construction. But the confidential feasibility study warns that it is "highly probable none of the three proposed systems would be able to meet its proposed schedule" and that all three proposals would "probably experience a certain amount of cost overruns."

The analysis goes on to warn that Arctic's Canadian pipeline may not work at all under any circumstances. The idea of building the pipeline under harsh winter conditions, with temperatures often dropping to 50 degrees below zero, "would prove basically impracticable and would require extensive revisions or project abandonment," the study declares.

President Carter must decide which, if any, of the three plans will be implemented. Whatever his decision, it probably will wind up costing the taxpayers billions.

Footnote: The feasibility study was prepared at a cost of $120,000 by Research Planning Associates. The three firms that want to construct the pipeline have submitted their critical comments. Then a final version will be presented to the president. It is expected to have "considerable influence" upon the president, a spokesman said.

Nuclear Nightmare: Nuclear power has been ballyhooed as a cheap form of energy, which could replace oil and solve the energy crisis. Yet there is dismaying evidence that nuclear power is actually running up utility bills and aggravating unemployment.

The story is told in a forthcoming book, "Nuclear Power: The Bargain We Can't Afford," by the Washington-based Environmental Action Foundation. We have obtained the raw galley proofs. Here are a few of the highlights:

— The book alleges that nuclear power plants have had average cost overruns of 100 per cent. In most instances, unsafe designs and equipment had to be corrected at a cost that was passed along to the utility customers.

— The nuclear industry has claimed its exhorbitant capital costs are offset by the low cost of radioactive uranium. But the truth, according to the book, is that uranium supplies are dwindling dangerously. Already, the price has shot up from $7 to $42 per pound. It could reach $250 a pound by 1985, the book warns.

— Because of soaring prices, Westinghouse Electric, the nation's largest builder of nuclear plants, abruptly canceled all of its uranium contracts. This leaves 27 utilities with no guarantee of future supplies.

Guns and Butter:

National labor chief warns don't use 'Human Rights' as arms sales standard

WASHINGTON— It may be giving the self-purging Soviet Politburo some comfort to read in America's public prints that a new "left wing" coalition chomps impatiently on time in the wings, waiting for the old guard to fade away. There is an impression abroad that the American labor movement will shift directions when all it factions merge into a 20-million-member federation.

True, it will merge. And in the next five years. But though it will shift gears, it won't shift directions on basic policies when feisty George Meany pounds his last gavel.

It takes no Star Trek time machine to anticipate the headline-makers of the '80s. Among them certainly will be William W. Winpisinger, now chief of staff (and vice president) of the million-member International Association of Machinists (AFL-CIO). At 52, he talks loud and clear, as he waits to take over the mammoth union's presidency on July 1.

There isn't any doubt that Machinist chief Bill Winpisinger will cast the mold of many future AFL-CIO policies. Indeed, this machine-gun tongued militant may someday sit in the mightiest seat of the AFL-CIO. So what "Winpy" has to say on guns and butter, as my elders used to put it, and on human rights and the sale abroad of futuristic sound barrier-smashing jet fighters is of significance. Especially to President Carter.

And he told the President of the U.S. -- as he has one or two other Presidents on other issues - forget it.

If the U.S. uses "human rights" as a standard for sales of jet fighters to other nations we will drive them right into the hands of the real enemy, Winpisinger warned. Winpy, who is a voracious militant when he battles on the collective bargaining front, said in effect -- don't use our standard of government as the basis of choice of allies and customers for our fantastic fighter aircraft.

Winpy, who isn't fazed by labor chief George Meany, told Jimmy Carter and the Congress not to impose "indiscriminate restrictions on sales of military aircraft.

"We cannot agree with those who demand that military sales be limited to nations that are Simon-pure in terms of human rights," said Winpisinger.

Does this make this left-winger a right-winger? Or does it develop my basic theory that labor chiefs survive by delivering to their constituencies -- in this case scores of thousands of aerospace members of the Machinists' union.

Winpy, as always, as other U.S. Presidents have learned, was telling it like it is.

"If we were to cut off aid to every country that is not a perfect democracy, and if we were to limit our trade solely to those countries possessing all the atrtirbutes of parliamentary democracy, including a free press and a bill of rights (sic), we would have to retreat into a shell of isolationism like that of the 1930s. It didn't work then. It won't work now.

"We do not believe Congress or the President can reform undemocratic regimes by placing them in economic quarantine. Such action is more likely to drive them into arms of even more repressive regimes."

So, Winpisinger urged, sell American war planes abroad to all but enemies of the U.S. because without such sales our aerospace industry will begin falling apart -- and with it our leadership of commercial planes in the friendly skies.

Winpisinger isn't unique in the so-called liberal left-of-center bloc inside labor. There's the United Auto Workers brand new president Doug Fraser, with whom the trend watchers say Winpisinger soon will coalesce inside the AFL-CIO to give that 91-year-old federation (which has had but three presidents, not including one who served for a year) a new leftward look.

Doug Fraser has a deep interest in the prosperity of the armament industry as well as "aerospace."

There is a matter of some $3 billion worth of new Army fighter tank production which will create thousands of jobs in Detroit and-or Lima, Ohio. That is, in ta GM facility or in Chrysler's. Or both.

Does this turn Fraser into an armament-monger? Or a "right-winger"? Hardly. These leaders are realists. This isn't the time to "psyche" their motives -- or those of the AFL-CIO's Executive Council, which in February demanded the full spending of $21.6 billion over 10 years to complete the B-1 strategic bomber program.

Does this make them right-wingers? No. It does prove they're for a powerful defensive force, on which the U.S. can rest while the Soviets shift their own political apparatus and sift the sands of Africa below the Sahara.

My elders used to say you can't churn butter with guns. Right. But you can make lots of bread for lots of workers. If there's no war, you simply make new weapons. If there is conflict, it's nice to have the old ones around -- at home and among your allies abroad. You can always lecture those allies if they survive. If they don't it will have done little good moralizing them into a stupor.

That's the labor chief's message to Jimmy Carter, I do believe.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, who headed a special investigation into the sale of timber at Weldon Spring, said Thursday that he didn't believe there was any evidence of criminal activity.

"Just the probability of incompetency at a very costly level to the state," Vossmeyer said after the hearing on the timber sale in which a logger paid the University of Missouri approximately $44,000 and grossed almost $189,000.

Russell Porter, the logger, said he believed he made a "good profit" on the venture and that it was unlikely that he would ever be able to do it again.

Homer L'Hote, the university official who approved the transaction, told the House Governmental Review Committee his blessings on the sales were a "mistake in judgement."

The committee subpoenaed Porter and L'Hote in an effort to determine why the university did not receive a higher price for the timber cut by Porter at the forest in St. Charles County in 1976 and 1977.

Porter, a University of Missouri graduate, told the committee that he did not reveal the exact amount of money he had received for the logs he cut from Weldon Spring at an earlier hearing because he didn't want the public to know how much money he made in the venture.

"The public didn't have to know how much I received," Porter said. "I feel justified in what I paid and I feel justified in what I received."

Porter, who cut almost 800 walnut and white oak trees which were later sold to buyers in West Germany and Japan, said he was taught in school "to buy my inputs as low as possible and to sell my outputs as high as possible."

Porter siad he thought he made a good profit. "Better than I ever expected," he said.

L'Hote, assistant director of the university's agricultural experiment station, said he did not check with anyone on the fairness of the price offered by Porter for the trees. Porter had first contacted L'Hote about cutting trees at the Weldon Spring area in 1973 while he was still a student on the Columbia campus.

Porter later was asked by L'Hote if he wanted to harvest more timber from the 8,000-acre tract of land and he submitted the prices he was willing to pay for the trees.

L'Hote testified that he asked Porter if the bids he gave represented a fair market price for the timber. Porter told him they did and L'Hote never questioned Porter's prices again.

"I felt like any of our students are reputable people," L'Hote said. L'Hote said he did not know what Porter had been receiving for the trees he had cut. "I thought he would give a fair price," he said.

Porter defended not telling the committee at an earlier hearing on the timber sale how much money he had received for the trees. Although a report by State Auditor Thomas Keyes indicated Porter received almost $189,000 for the trees, he told the committee he had only received $86,000.

"I didn't feel like I was lying," Porter said. He underplayed the amount he received for the timber, he said, to save himself from embarrassment in the community.

The House earlier this week approved a bill requiring the university to obtain legislative approval for all large land sales. The Senate has already approved the measure but they must okay an amendment tacked on to the bill by the House.

That proposal would require the university to obtain bids on any mineral, timber or natural resources valued at more than $500.

'Presents Double Feature'

"Richie Brockeman, the Missing 24 Hours"

A neophyte gumshoe quickly becomes a seasoned veteran when he is hired by an amnesia victim who can't explain why she's the target of two gunmen, in "Richie Brockelman, the Missing 24 Hours," the first half of a double feature presentation on BC-TV Sunday, May 29 (7-8:30 p.m.).

The film will be followed by "Benny and Barney, Las Vegas Undercover" (8:30-10 p.m. DST).

Dennis Dugan stars as the private eye and Suzanne Pleshette makes a special guest appearance as the amnesia victim.

Out of desperation, Elizabeth Morton reluctantly hires young Rickie Brockelman to drive her to San Diego for a $250 fee. Brockelman, believing the job is quite simple, agrees, but when he returns her to her motel, two men shoot at them. After their lucky getaway, an angry Richie insists on an explanation and Elizabeth makes a bizarre confession.

"Benny & Barney" Las Vegas Undercover

The Las Vegas Strip provides the backdrop for "Benny and Barney, Las Vegas Undercover," the second half of a double feature presentation on NBC-TV Sunday, May 29 (8:30-10: p.m. DST).

Ex-showgirl Margie Parks witnesses the slaying of Las Vegas entertainer Will Dawson. Fearing adverse publicity which would affect her child-custody fight, she turns to Barney Tuscom and Benny Kowalski, two suspended cops working as The Aristocrats, a singing duo. When they arrive on the scene, Benny and Barney are surprised to learn from Police Lt. Callan that Dawson was not slain, but is a kidnap victim.

The Drug Scene

Part IV

Sikeston's own "Head Shop" does a thriving business in the paraphernalia dealing with drugs.

THE DRUG SCENE

Part IV

By Robert Vaughan

This is the final article in a series of investigative reports dealing with both the drug scene, and the sex businesses in Sikeston. Commercial sex is one of the most lucrative of all unsavory businesses, and therefore tends to mushroom once it establishes roots in a community. Those roots have been established in Sikeston, and it is going to be very difficult to eradicate them. Difficult, but not impossible. The federal and state governments have placed that right and responsibility in the hands of local communities. But local ordanances must be effective, if they are to do the job. And effective laws cannot be drawn up if the specifics aren't addressed. Specifics cannot be addressed if the facts are not known, and that is what this series of articles has attempted to provide. It is an offensive business, so describing it can sometimes be offensive itself. I have made an effort to couch my descriptions in such a way as to provide the maximum information, with the minimum offense. It is a difficult line to walk, and so I ask your indulgence for those areas in which I may have been too vague, and I beg your pardon for those places where I may have been too explicit. But please remember that knowledge is the armor of truth, and truth is the sword of justice.

The Director of Public Safety, Ken Francis, was most cooperative, and eager to speak with me for the final series

For the last three weeks, I have been devoting the stories in this magazine to the drug scene in Sikeston. I have also written two editorials concerning the massage parlors and pornographic material for sale in town.

For this final article, I have decided to bring them together into one, all-encompassing article. After all, there is some basis of relationship between the two, they are but one layer apart in the structure of society. The sex oriented business crosses and re-crosses the sometimes indistinct line of legality, the drug business is generally illegal.

It is interesting however, that even in the drug business, there is that shadow area where the law cannot reach. I touched on this briefly in the very first article of this series with features from the magazine High Times.

Many of the articles in that magazine repeated the line, "Check at your local head-shop", when they were talking about the drug equipment for sale. "The rush hits you like a skydiver, when you use this smoking bong," one ad ran.

Now, for those users in Sikeston who want the rush to hit them like a skydiver, there are smoking bongs available. Not only bongs, but roach clips (devices for holding a marijuana cigarette when it gets down to the very end) and other drug-related items. Sikeston has its very own headshop, located on Greer Street, right behind Long John Silver's.

I think it is very important here that you are familiar with the term, 'head shop', which means a place where 'dope-heads' can buy their equipment. Don't get it confused with Head Shed, which is a legitimate hair styling salon in town.

It is not against the law to sell the equipment necessary to smoke hashish, though it is against the law to sell hashish itself. But the very fact that there is a business establishment which is doing business in these things, shows that someone is buying them....and someone is using them. They can't all be for decoration.

I spoke with the Sikeston Public Safety Director to get the police story with regard to the drug scene in Sikeston.

"Do we have a problem? Well, to a certain degree,"Francis said. "It depends of course on the definition of the term problem."

"I can appreciate that the definition of the term is dependent upon the amount of cases we are dealing with," I said. "So, how many cases are we dealing with?"

"Bear in mind that the number of cases we see won't necessarily be indicative of the number of cases there actually are. But it can at least give us something to go on. This list covers everything which is drug-related and in which we have become involved, since the first of this year."

I looked at the sheet of paper Francis handed me, and extracted this information:

Public Safety Department
Criminal Investigation Division
Marijuana
Number of cases under investigation
34

34
Number of arrests made
27 (7 not made)
Prosecutions
31
Total pounds of marijuana conficsated
16 pounds 3 oz. (40 plants)

Average age
18.8 years
4 females, 23 males

"This tends to support a theory I have developed over the last few weeks," I said. "I believe there is an active drug culture in Sikeston, but that the age is just beyond high school age. There are, to be sure, high school kids using it, but the actual culture is just beyond high school age."

"That would tend to be the indication from our side of it," Francis said.

"Do you have a division which deals with drugs?" I asked.

"No, not as such," Francis said. "When we get wind of a case, or when investigation is necessary, then we turn it over to our CID people and they handle it from there."

"You said when you get wind. How do you get wind? Do you have undercover agents working?"

"Well, no, not as such. We have done undercover work in the process of investigating activity. I, of course, can't go into that too much. Sometimes when we make an arrest for one thing, we are led into something else. This is especially true of the drug scene. Sometimes someone who is arrested will tell on others in his group, in order to ensure a better position for himself."

"Do you use informers regularly?"

"We do use them, but we have to be very careful. You don't want to burn your sources, so you have to play that end of it very carefully.

"What about some of the places where rumor says that the users can score? Are you aware of what the places are?"

"Yes, and we keep our eyes open. Information gets back to us as to who is doing what, and where they are doing it."

"What about the massage parlors, and the porno-book store?" I asked.

"I've been hearing quite a bit about that lately," Francis said. "We keep an eye open there too. From what I've been able to determine, the massage parlors are very strict on their girls. They allow no sex whatever."

"They allow no copulation. They do provide locals. Do you know what those are?"

"Yes," he said. "But as of now, they are doing nothing that breaks the law. You know when this new one, this Scorpio, came into town, they hired a lawyer. I don't mean they hired one just to help them set up with papers and so forth. they hired a lawyer to help keep them out of trouble. Now you have to admit that there is something suspect about a company which moves into town and starts a business, then hires a lawyer to keep them out of trouble as their very first act."

"What about the girls who work there?" I asked.

"They seem to have a very high turn-over," Francis answered.

I left the police station wondering just what the massage parlors looked for in the girls they hired, so I located a girl who had just applied for a job, then decided not to take it.

"Who did you talk with?" I asked.

"Two young girls," she answered.

"How young?"

"They could have been 21, but I doubt it."

"Did they have the authority to hire you?"

"They had the authority to recommend me. But I would have to see the big boss later, before I was officially hired."

"What went on? I mean from the moment you went in and applied for a job?"

"Well, when I went in, there were these two girls there. They looked at me very strangely, and then one of them asked me if she could help. I told her I was looking for a job."

"You are looking for a job, lady?" one of them asked.

"I said yes, I just got divorced and I need the money. I think they were surprised because I was a little older than average. In fact, they asked me how old I was, and when I said I was thirty, I could tell they were surprised I had come in."

"Have you ever worked in a massage parlor before?" one of the girls asked.

"No, but I'm willing to give it a try," I answered.

"The girl gave me a form to fill out, and when I was finished, asked me one more time if I was serious. I replied that I was, so she said, "Do you have any hangups about taking off your clothes?"

"When I answered no, the girl asked me to step into one of the rooms and strip. I did that, and a few minutes later she came into the room and made me turn around slowly so she could look at my body. Then she asked me to sit on the massage table and she walked around, examining me again."

"What was she looking for?"

"Scars. She said that their customers don't like girls with bad scars on their bodies."

"Did she tell you what would be expected of you?"

"Yes. I told her I had never done this before, and I wanted to know just what was expected of me. She told me that the man would be nude, and I would be nude. I would give him a rubdown, and then I would give him a local. She asked me if I knew what a local was, and I said yes. She said that a local was a regular part of the massage, and she hoped I didn't have any aversions to doing that."

"Then what?"

"She told me that after I gave the man a massage then he was to be allowed to give me one. But where the man was concerned, it was to be strictly a massage, and nothing more. I was told that I would have to sign an agreement to that effect and it would notarized.

"What else did the girl say?"

"After the massage was over, the man could take a shower if he wanted to, but I couldn't get into the shower with him. I could lean in, but not put my entire body in."

"What about the pay?"

"The pay is very good. $135 for three days work, and she said you never make less than $75 pr week in tips. She said that if you satisfy the customer, that when he comes back the tip will be two or three times as high as it was the first time."

"Did she say anything else?"

"Yes. She said that when she first started working there she felt like a slut everytime she touched a man, that it was really degrading. But finally she got to thinking that if a man wanted to pay her to do this then he was just as bad as she was. In fact, she said that she considers everyone who comes there now as a pervert. She said she had to really psyche herself up to to come out and start work, and it generally took a couple of hours to get ready. She generally did this by reading trashy magazines."

"What did you tell her?"

"I told her that I would have to let her know. That I was going to have a hard time dealing with it."

"And did you call back?"

This is the conclusion of the investigative series on the drug scene, and the inner-related sex business of Sikeston. It is the end of the series, but hopefully, not the end of concern. There is much cause for concern here. There are many locations in Sikeston where the young people tend to congregate and traffic in drugs. When the police makes one of them too hot, the users simply move to another location. And now, there is operating publicly, a headshop, or store dealing in drug paraphernalia.

In addition to the drug points, there are the sex connections. In addition to the slick, near-porno magazines which are displayed openly in several magazine racks around town, there is now the brazen operation of the explicit porno-book store right down town. There are two massage parlors, where for a fee, a nude male can be massaged with all its implications, by a nude female, or females.

But concerned citizens have already begun an effort to turn this cancerous growth back A petition was presented to the City Council this week, asking the City Council to look into the situation, and the City Council has promised to examine the issue. It is the first step in building the dike to stem the tide of inner-city decay, both in drugs and sex businesses It is a vestige of freedom which says that we, as a city, can establish our own patterns of public decency. It is our manifest right, and solemn obligation to do so.

Director Ken Francis. He's started on the drug problem. But can he do something about the massage parlors?

A Sikeston Alternative

By Robert Vaughan

I'm impressed with John Braddock. I'm impessed, because I met him in a skeptical frame of mind, primarily discharging an obligation to a friend more than anything else, and yet came away convinced that John Braddock is for real.

Why was I a skeptic? Because John Braddock was an ex-addict and an ex-con who was trying to start some sort of counselling program in Sikeston. As I understood it, it was some sort of charismatic movement, stemming from the fact that John Braddock had lived a life of sin, but had been 'saved' in a religious experience. Since that time, he has dedicated his life to saving others.

"I tend to be skeptical of this sort of thing," I said. "Not because I am not cognizant of the power of God, but because in my way of thinking, charismatic people tend to detract from the real issue. People like Amy Simple McPherson, for example, don't rate very high in my book."

"I don't think we should be judgemental in our appraisal of her. I think some of the information about her may have been distorted. Like Katherine Kuhlman for example. I think she did some wonderful things, but now there is a book out which tends to lay some bad things on her."

"I don't mean to be judgemental in that sense," I said. "But what bothers me is the commercialization of this type thing. The spangled clothes, the hoopla, the uproar."

"Right," John said. "I see where you are coming from now. I misunderstood you. I thought you were saying you didn't believe in the concept of God healing. But you are talking about people who take God's light onto themselves."

"Yes. I interviewed Dr. Reed last year, and he is a medical Doctor who also believes in faith healing. But his is a very low key approach, and that kind of approach I can appreciate. But what about you? What was the basis of your transformation?"

"Something....down inside....just rebelled. I had had enough. I was sick of my life."

"Well, I went through it all," John said. I started using marijuana at the age of 14. And I took pills, finally I got onto the hard stuff."

"Let me ask you something," I interrupted. "You were in that life, you were smoking pot and dropping pills. You knew what the life was like, you knew what you were getting into by messing aound with heroin, yet you did it. Why?"

"The only thing I can say is that I was finally drawn into it. You know, many people say that if you smoke pot long enough it will lose its kick and you'll have to go to the next step. That's not true. Pot doesn't lose its kick, you could smoke it for one hundred years. But, you have to realize that I was deeply involved in this culture with all my friends. We were all into drugs and most of the others, people I had grown up with, were using heroin. They kept trying to get me to do it but I refused for almost two years. Then one day I went to my connection's house to score and he didn't have any marijuana. He suggested I try a little heroin. I looked around and saw some of my friends on the nod...meaning that they were high on heroin, so I took a shot. I mainlined the first time. After that, I was so involved in it anyway, that I just slid right on into it."

"The prison record came next?"

"Yes. I was in and out of jails, prisons, Rehabilitation Centers, hospitals, everything. I had the best psychiatric help, but nothing pulled me off. I remember writing my mother just before getting out of one the institutions, telling her that I was cured. But as soon as I got out, I got high again, and I remember that when I got off the bus I was so high I didn't even recognize my mother. She cried all the way home."

"When did the transformation come?"

"I went right back into the drug scene and it wasn't anytime [illegible] until I was arrested again. Then one day shortly thereafter, I was in jail and something.....down inside...just rebelled. I had just had enough. I was sick of my life, and sick of what I was doing to myself and everyone else. My mother had told me many times to give Jesus a chance. She was a good Christian, but I never gave much thought to what she said. But, for some reason that day I said I'd give it a try. After she left I asked the jailer...and I'd been there so often I knew all of them by name.....if he'd bring me a bible. He did, and I read it while everyone else went for their hour dayroom and recreation break. I was alone, and to be honest I couldn't understand most of what I read. But something...I know now it was the Holy Spirit...moved me, and I got down on my knees and prayed. I said, 'Jesus, if you want my life, it's yours to do with as you please'. Well, before long I just changed. I could tell that I had. And I told my mother I had changed. She offered to go my bail if I would go to Teen Challenge and work there, and I agreed. And, it had been a long time since she had gone my bail for me, because before I always skipped out. This time though, I went to Teen Challenge, and I worked, and I witnessed for the Lord. Then other things began to happen. By a technicality, my charge was changed, so that instead of facing a 5 to twenty year sentence, I faced a 2 to twenty. That also meant that the judge could grant me probation if he wanted to. By the time I went down for sentencing, I was ready to accept God's will, whatever it was. The judge looked at my jacket for a long time, then looked at me. 'I don't normally do this,' he said, 'but something tells me you are going to make it this time'. He gave me three years probation and I had to pinch myself when I walked out of there. From there, I went on to Bethany Bible College. I got married to a wonderful woman who has helped me all the way, and now I am a minister fulfilling a genuine call to serve Jesus."

"And that is what you are doing here?"

"Yes. The Sikeston Christian Center will be to provide counselling for anyone who needs it. Counselling of a spiritual nature. God helped me, and I know He can help others in the same way."

"How is your program going?"

"We have a board of advisors, made up of clergy and lay people. And, we have a building already, the old Accent Shop. We are entirely funded by donations, and though we have received many generous gifts, we need much more. We need outright donations, and pledges from anyone who will help us in this work."

"When will you open?"

"I hope we are open by the end of next month. At least we are aiming for that."

"I hope you are too, John. I think what you are doing is worthwhile, and considering the new businesses which have been the subject of my stories for the last few weeks, this is a breath of fresh air."

Prince Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER
Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT AND GUNTHER ARE GUESTS IN THE SAFETY OF SHEIK ABDUL EL MOHAMMED'S PALACE. BUT GUNTHER BECOMES IMPATIENT AND CALLS FOR HIS MOUNT.
MAFAUD, HANDSOME YOUNG CAPTAIN OF THE PALACE GUARD, TRIES TO DISSUADE HIM. "I GO WHERE AND WHEN I PLEASE," HE ANSWERS.
"THE DESERT CHIEFTAIN WHO TRIED TO STEAL THE LADY ZARA CONSIDERS ALL WITHIN THIS HOUSE HIS ENEMIES. HIS SPIES KEEP WATCH."
BUT GUNTHER HAS BUT ONE THOUGHT IN LIFE: TO FIND AND PUNISH THOSE FALSE NOBLES WHO STOLE THE HOLY RELICS FROM THE ALTAR AND MURDERED HIS FAMILY.
© King Features Syndicate, Inc., 1977. World rights reserved.
SO GREAT IS THE DESERT CHIEFTAIN'S HATE FOR SHEIK ABDUL, THAT IT APPLIES TO EVERYONE UNDER HIS ROOF. HE SUMMONS SOME OF HIS WARRIORS AND FOLLOWS GUNTHER.
GUNTHER HEARS THE SOUND OF PURSUIT AND TURNS TO MEET THE THREAT. THE CHIEFTAIN CANNOT MANEUVER IN THE NARROW WAY AND MEETS THE LANCE AT FULL GALLOP. WITH MACE AND SCIMITAR, THE OTHERS ATTACK.
PERHAPS THE ARRIVAL OF MAFAUD MADE THEM HURRY THEIR WORK, FOR GUNTHER IS STILL ALIVE, AND IS TAKEN TO THE PALACE.

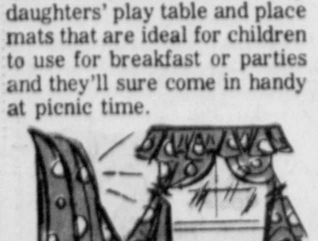
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:
I went to a final, final bargain sale today and among the goodies I picked up was a beautiful print shower curtain.

The only problem I had was in finding window curtains to match so, on an impulse, I bought another shower curtain exactly the same.

I didn't realize what a gold mine I had until I got home and started working with it. I was able to cut two pairs of curtains from that one shower curtain.

I also made a doily for my tank cover, a tablecloth for my daughters' play table and place mats that are ideal for children to use for breakfast or parties and they'll sure come in handy at picnic time.



Of course, by being plastic, the place mats, table cloth, etc. can be machine washed every so often to keep them fresh.

I feel good about the great bargain I got.

Barbara Colie

STATIC BREAKER

DEAR HELOISE:
Did you know that there are two things you can do to help control static electricity in a busy office with lots of metal files and desks?

First, to keep polyester pants from clinging to your legs, apply a generous coating of hand lotion to your legs, both under and over your stockings.

Second, to keep from getting shocked when approaching something metal that you must open, touch the metal surface with a coin first, then open with your hand.

Saves many a tingle.

Long-Time Reader

IN THE PIGGY BANK

DEAR HELOISE:
I am 14 years old. I read your column every Sunday and I really enjoy it.

My family is always breaking glasses. Well, I've thought of a grand idea of counting what we break.

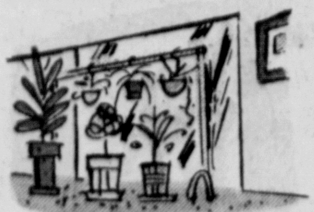
Get an old jar or piggy bank, and for every glass you break put a quarter or 15 cents in the piggy bank.

You will be surprised at how fast the money builds up, and you can take that money and buy a new set of glasses.

Tracy C.

PLANTS HANGER

DEAR HELOISE:
I liked this idea so much that perhaps some of your readers would like it also.



My daughter has two large glass sliding doors in the den. She has pots of plants in front of the one door that she doesn't open and it looks lovely. But I got a surprise when I visited one day and saw a garment rack in front of the door.

The large plants sit under the garment rack and an array of hanging plants hang where the clothes are to be hung.

BUREAU OF WORKS

DEAR HELOISE:
Pull drawers out too far and wham! — You spill everything.

IT'S A SNAP

DEAR HELOISE:
My problem — hundreds of snapshots.

Solution — a plastic recipe box.

Use the filing cards for the years and file each snapshot back of the year it was taken.

Lucille Edge

VACUUM SAVER

DEAR HELOISE:
When my vacuum cleaner bag gets full I carefully make a slit or cut across the fold and empty the contents of the bag in the garbage.

I wipe the dust off the inside of the bag and glue the bag where it was cut.

I then take a piece a paper-type masking tape and put it over the cut and this double seals the bag.

Some bags are quite expensive and this way you can use the bag two or three times.

Esther Deleake

DEAR HELOISE:
I've been reading your most helpful hints for years and now I have one for you!

Just slip the spaghetti in these cans and it will keep, and also will be bug-free.

Aunt Minnie

NEEDLEPOINT TIP

DEAR HELOISE:
My mother took up needlepoint and she does about six or seven canvasses a year. She mostly designs her own, so obviously she has extra yarn.

To preserve it without knotting, she takes the plastic hoops from a six-pack of soft drinks, loosely ties a group of yarn (same color) around each hoop and then sticks it in her needlepoint bag, which is made of cloth.

The plastic hoops are twice as useful for the price of one, and the cloth bag is used to carry the yarn and canvas in.

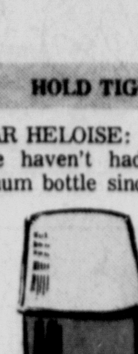
HOLD TIGHT!

DEAR HELOISE:
We haven't had a broken vacuum bottle since I started putting several heavy rubber bands about the middle of the bottle.



Gives a good grip and doesn't slip.

ALL THUMBS! Fan out a dozen or more cards. Hold them up so that your audience may identify them. Ask someone in the crowd to point to a card, which you proceed to work out of the pack as shown above. Present it to the person who selected it, together with the pack. Ask that the cards be shuffled thoroughly and returned to you. Now, upon running through the pack, you discover the selected card.
